WASHINGTON NEWS.

Conclusion of Mr. Ames' Testimony on Credit Mobilier.

Singular Proposition from Judge Black, McComb's Counsel.

Liability of Postmasters for Letters Registered in their Offices.

Probable Action on the Geneva Award Bill Before Recess.

Mr. Brooks' Position Among Democrats Impaired.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The examination of Oakes Ames was concluded today before the Credit Mobilier Committee. It is reported that Mr. Ames has told a very frank story to the Committee regarding his operations with the stock; that he has given, with great particularity, the transaction with each member; that he has furnished memoranda of dates, amounts, and occurrences; that his testimony will show that some members took the stock at the price demanded, and paid for it; that others declined to take it, that still others took it, held it awhile, and then sold it back to him; that one or two have received dividends upon it, and that, in his judgment, they had a right to buy it and to receive the fruits of their investment. The Committee then permitted Judge Black to cross-examine Mr. Ames, and there was some very sharp sparring for over an hour. Mr. Ames kept his temper better than was supposed, and he retaliated upon Black by exposing a proposition of the latter, made last Saturday night, that if he (Ames) would admit that he held this Credit Mobilier stock in trust for McComb, this investigation could be discontinued, and the reputations of several parties saved. It will probably transpire that many members named in the original list were offered stock, and that nearly all of them held that they had a right to buy it if they were able, but that not more than two or three did make any investments of that character.

THE LIABILITY OF POSTMASTERS.

A very important decision has recently been made at the Post-office Department. The Postmaster-General has decided that all Postmasters are liable to the Government for the value of all registered letters lost in their offices. This principle, which has been long maintained with respect to minor offices, has never been applied to offices where any considerable number of letters has been registered. It is now claimed that the bond of Postmasters covers such case of loss. It is insisted by those who oppose this ruling that the bond does not cover such cases; that inasmuch as the Government disclaims all liability for the loss of such letters, even that of an ordinary common carrier, the Postmaster is by no means liable to the Government for a loss which the Government does not sustain. There is eminent legal authority against the liability of Postmasters for such loss. The definite establishment of such a principle will render the responsibility under Postmasters' bonds much greater than has been supposed.

The House Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads overruled the ruling of the Postmaster-General relative to double postage upon unprepaid matter, and decided that such a construction of the law was strained. The Committee will to-morrow report a bill in accordance with such decision.

THE CHEROKEE NEUTRAL LANDS.

The morning hour of the Senate was spent in discussing a bill which, according to the speeches in opposition, might be called an act to reward certain people of Kansas for squatting on the Cherokee neutral lands, in violation of law, and being legally ejected from the same. The bill did not pass, though, with some amendments, it is likely to become a law, as there is admitted to be a basis of justice in the claim.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF SENATOR DAVIS' DEATH.

The announcement by Senator Stevenson of the death of his late colleague, Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, was followed by eulogies from Senator Matchen, (Mr. Davis' successor,) Messrs. Thurman, Trumbull, Bayard, and Sumner. A resolution expressing the respect of the Senate for the memory of Mr. Davis was passed, and the Senate adjourned. On the communication of the resolution to the House, brief speeches were made by Messrs. Beck, Adams, Arthur, and McHenry, of Kentucky, Banks, of Massachusetts, Poland, of Vermont, and Wood, of New-York. At the conclusion of the speeches the House adjourned.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

The President was at his room in the Senate wing of the Capitol a short time this afternoon. His visit attracted considerable attention, but is said not to have had a very important object. It is rumored, however, that he desires action before recess on the bill to distribute the Alabama claims award, and that he prefers that the Courts rather than a commission should determine the claims. This would allow of appeals wherever the Government or any claimant might feel that injustice was done in the decision of the first tribunal.

THE PASSAGE OF THE DEFICIENCY BILL DELAYED.

The House sought to finish the Deficiency bill, today, but the captious opposition of the Democratic members prevented. The several votes taken show that the appropriation for the District of Columbia, which is the feature of dispute, has a clear majority of 20 to 25 votes. A motion to reduce the amount from $1,340,000 to $740,000, was lost by 20 majority.

VENTILATION OF THE SENATE CHAMBER.

The Chief Engineer in charge of the heating and ventilating of the Senate Chamber has written a letter to the architect of the Capitol, which has been referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, in which he asks an appropriation of $10,000 to extend by means of a tunnel the inlets for fresh air about 300 feet from the Capitol, to the lower terrace, in the West Capitol Park. The engineer states that this work is needed on account of the present defective situation of the inlets. When the wind is in certain directions, counter currents carry the coal gas from the boiler flues down to the inlets, whence it is drawn into the Chamber. With this improvement nothing more would be desired in the ventilation of the Senate wing of the Capitol.

THE COTTON TAX.

Herschel V. Johnson, of Georgia, will soon, perhaps, to-morrow, have a hearing before the Ways and Means Committee of the House in regard to the refunding of the cotton tax.

MR. BROOKS' AND THE CREDIT MOBILIER.

There is a good deal of dissatisfaction on the Democratic side of the House with Mr. Brooks' account of his Credit Mobilier relations. Some of the more prominent Democrats express great surprise that he was not able to make a clearer exhibit of his innocence of the published allegations against him. It is cruelly intimated that Brooks suffers from the jealousy of Democrats who are displeased that the distribution of the stock had not been more general on that side of the House.

BILLS SIGNED BY THE PRESIDENT.

The President has signed the act for repairing, furnishing, and ornamenting the United States Custom-house and Post-office at Bath, Me.; the act for the removal of disabilities of L. Q. C. Lamar, of Mississippi; the act for the construction of bridges over the Ohio River, and prescribing the dimensions of the same; and the act authorizing the issuance of college scrip to the State of Arkansas.

GEN. BLAIR'S HEALTH.

A letter from Francis P. Blair, Sr., will appear in the Chronicle, to-morrow, correcting the statement of that journal today that Gen. Blair was so seriously ill as to leave little hope of his resuming his seat in the Senate. Mr. Blair says this report is circulated to affect Gen. Blair's election, and he gives extracts from late letters of Col. Grant, Gen. Blair's neighbor and friend, saying the General is much better, and that his cure is steadily and rapidly advancing.

THE REVENUE MARINE.

The United States revenue cutter Hamilton has been ordered to Boston, to take the place of the Mahoning, which is withdrawn for the purpose of having new boilers supplied. The Mahoning will perform the Winter cruising in that section in the meantime. The cruising grounds of the revenue steamers Grant, at New-York, and the Colfax, at Baltimore, have been extended so as to cover the limits left vacant by the withdrawal of the Hamilton from Philadelphia.

GREAT FIRE AT FLUSHING.

Five Buildings Demolished to Stay the Progress of the Flames—One Man Killed and a Boy Seriously Injured.

A very destructive fire occurred last night at Flushing, Long Island, by which a large amount of valuable property was consumed, and which was also attended with loss of life. The fire was discovered at about 10 o'clock, in Clements & Bloodgood's grocery-store, and raged with much ferocity. Despite the exertions of the firemen, it extended to the adjoining building, and then assumed such a threatening aspect that the firemen were compelled to demolish five frame buildings to stop the progress of the flames. Assistance was called for from Hunter's Point, and the officials of the Flushing and North-side Railroad at once dispatched a platform car to Hunter's Point for fire-engines.

During the burning of the buildings, a chimney fell, and buried in the ruins one man, who was almost instantly killed. An unknown boy was seriously injured at the same time. The greatest excitement prevailed among the people, who feared a general conflagration. At midnight, the fire was raging with intensity. The loss to property could not be estimated at that late hour.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Passage of Concurring Resolutions Censuring Senator Sumner.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 18.—The resolutions condemnatory of the course of Senator Sumner, in introducing a bill into the United States Senate to remove all inscriptions relating to the rebellion from the Army Register and national regimental flags, came up in the House of Representatives this afternoon, and, after a short debate, the question was taken on a motion to indefinitely postpone the resolves by yeas and nays, but this was lost by a vote of 92 to 93, and then the resolutions were passed by 104 yeas to 76 nays.

They were taken up in the Senate this afternoon, and a warm debate took place, in which most of the Senators took part, when the motion to indefinitely postpone was lost, by a vote of 14 to 19, and then the resolutions were passed, twenty voting in the affirmative and nine in the negative.

Fasting and Prayer to Prevent the Spread of Small-Pox—A Clerical Lady—Revision of the Territorial Laws.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 18.—To-morrow has been appointed a day of fasting and prayer in St. John's Valley, Tooele County, that the Almighty may be merciful and prevent the spread of small-pox there.

A lady is preparing to occupy the pulpit in one of the orthodox churches of this city.

A division of opinion prevails among the Gentiles as to the wisdom of calling an extra session of the Territorial Legislature to revise the laws. Those in favor of it state that the Mormons would have a chance to correct their errors; while those against it hold that compulsion only will bring about the abandonment of polygamy, and that an extra session of the Legislature will avoid nothing, but merely defer a remedy through Congress.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec., 18.—In the Circuit Court yesterday George A. King, conductor; William O'Brien, engineer, and J. W. Hastings, fireman of a construction-train, entered suit against the St. Louis, Kansas City, and Northern Railroad for damages aggregating $30,000 for injuries received in consequence of a collision of their train with a passenger-train, resulting from alleged negligence on the part of the Company in not showing signal lights and flags at the station where the accident occurred, to notify them of the approaching train.

SANITARY VIGILANCE.

Important Recommendations with Regard to Small-Pox.

A Corps of Vaccinators to be Organized for Immediate Action—Interesting Report Concerning Adulterated Food.

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday, a number of important matters were considered. Chief among them was the subject of small-pox.

Dr. E. H. Janes, City Sanitary Inspector, announced that there were twenty cases reported last week. The number for the corresponding week in 1871 was fifty. Of the twenty cases, fourteen were vaccinated in infancy, three were never vaccinated, one innoculated seven years ago, one three times vaccinated unsuccessfully. Six of the cases have been traced to those previously reported.

The following important report in regard to small-pox was presented by the Sanitary Committee to the Board:

The Sanitary Committee respectfully call the attention of the Board to the fact that the prevalence of small-pox in this City depends upon: First—The constant increase of unvaccinated infants among the poorer classes; and, second, the arrival of unprotected immigrants. The first source of danger is by far the greater, as it is estimated that not far from 35,000 infants are born in this City annually among the poor. Very little attention is paid to vaccination except during the prevalence of small-pox in an epidemic form; hence there is a constantly increasing number of unprotected children, until they reach a given percentage of the population, when small-pox begins its ravages, and an epidemic of greater or less severity is the consequence. The history of this domestic scourge in New-York for the past fifty years shows that, in the ordinary course of events, it is epidemic every three to five years. During its prevalence the unprotected either take the disease or are vaccinated, and, as a result, at the end of the period there are few or no unprotected persons in the City. In the following year there are generally but isolated cases of small-pox; the second there is a limited increase; but during the fourth or fifth years the epidemic again appears. There can be no doubt as to the method by which these recurring epidemics can be prevented. If no child were allowed to pass its sixth month without being properly vaccinated, the materials for small-pox would be so limited in amount and so widely scattered that only isolated cases could occur.

In the opinion of the Committee, it is a most important duty of this Board to secure, as far as its power and means will permit, the vaccination of all unvaccinated children and imperfectly vaccinated adults, at least twice in each year. As there is no law making vaccination compulsory, the general vaccination here contemplated can only be effected by personal visitations and persuasion of the vaccinators. For two years prior to the 1st of May last vaccination was very thoroughly performed throughout all parts of the City and among all classes. This work was done under a constant pressure of small-pox, which was epidemic in many parts of the country, and which constantly tended to assume an epidemic character in New-York. The records of this Department show that upward of 300,000 persons were vaccinated by the Health Inspectors, and it is safe to conclude that an equal number was vaccinated by medical practitioners and at the various dispensaries. By this means New-York was saved from a destructive epidemic, while other cities, where vaccination was neglected, were severely scourged.

It is an important fact that so uniformly was vaccination by the officers of this Board successful, that popular prejudice was almost entirely allayed, and persons, and even families, sought, at much inconvenience, to be vaccinated by Health Inspectors.

In view of these facts, the Sanitary Committee are of the opinion that a corps of vaccinators should be appointed, and the districts of the City occupied by the poorer classes should be thoroughly canvassed, and gratuitous vaccination should be offered to all who are unprotected. Since May last, but little vaccination has been performed, owing to the disappearance of small-pox. Meantime, it is estimated that upward of 17,000 infants have been born, and thousands of immigrants have taken up their abode in the tenement-houses. While it is not believed by the Committee that small-pox could become epidemic for a year or more, owing to the exhaustive vaccination of the entire population which has been made during the past two years, yet it becomes a matter of vast importance to the future health of the City that this preventive measure be so applied as to render an epidemic of small-pox impossible. And this can be effectually accomplished only by semi-annual house to house vaccination by the officers of this Board. As the present season is very favorable for vaccination, and as small-pox is present in the City, and epidemic in neighboring cities, the Committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the City Sanitary Inspector be and is hereby directed to organize, with the advice of the Sanitary Committee, a corps of vaccinators, and so distribute the work as, in an economical manner, to best secure the early vaccination of all persons thus unprotected.

G. CECCARINI, M. D.,
STEPHEN SMITH, M. D.,
MAGNUS GLOSS, } Committee.

The report was accepted, and the accompanying resolution was unanimously adopted.

ADULTERATION OF ARTICLES OF FOOD.

A communication from Prof. Chandler, the chemist of the Board, in regard to the adulteration of articles of food, was received and ordered on file. It set forth that he had found that 100 samples of powdered sugar, purchased at various stores, was altogether free from any intentional or accidental adulteration. Saleratus was found to be slightly adulterated with flour and common salt. Cream of tartar contained sulphate of lime to such an extent that in many cases it predominated. Various specimens of baking powders were of the ordinary degree of purity.

Yesterday the Sanitary Committee reported adversely to the application of the New-York Rendering Company to melt fat and lard at their works foot of West Thirty-eighth-street, by a new process.

The application of Superintendent Thorne, of the Street cleaning Bureau, to dump ashes on the vacant lots adjoining the dumping-grounds for a few days, was returned without action, as they have no jurisdiction in the matter.

Mr. A. J. Vanderpoel, the attorney and counsel to the Board, tendered his resignation. No action was taken thereon.

The Sanitary Committee presented its usual report of work done for the past week.

The following tabulated statement is furnished by the Register of Records:

	Week ending Dec. 7, 1872.	Week ending Dec. 14, 1872.	Annual death-rate per 1,000 during past week, estimated 1,000,000.....	Deaths in corresponding week of 1871.....	Average deaths in corresponding week for the past five years.....

A Desperate Encounter with a Panther.

From the Portland Oregonian, Dec. 6.

A professional hunter, named Repzs, was out hunting this week on Martin's Island, down the Columbia. The hunter was accompanied by a young hound only, which started some animal a little distance away in the dense brush. Repzs ran from the thick timber in which he was standing, toward the edge of the water. A clear space of several rods divided the brush and the river margin. On reaching the bank, Repzs halted and placed himself in an attitude of defense. In a few minutes, the hound emerged from the timber and came running toward its master. Immediately following the dog, and in hot pursuit, a large and ferocious panther bounded in sight. Repzs raised his gun to his shoulder and fired. The ball took effect in the jaws of the animal, but did not inflict any serious injury nor retard its advance toward the hunter. On firing, Repzs retreated into the water up to his arm-pits. The wounded and infuriated animal sprang after and "tackled" the hunter. The dog came to the rescue of his master, and made it so warm for the panther that it abandoned Repzs and turned on the hound. Repzs waded out toward the bank, turned around and fired the second barrel of his gun at the panther. The load was large buckshot, and took effect in the panther's side. The wound was very severe, but did not entirely disable the animal, which was getting the best of the dog. Seeing that the hound would soon be drowned, Repzs resolved to rescue it if possible. He had discharged both barrels of his gun, and cast aside his large bowie-knife in the edge of the timber when he started to retreat to the water. No time, however, was to be lost, and Repzs sprang into the river to save his dog. By this time the panther had lost much blood and was growing weak from exhaustion. The hunter, who was a powerful man, seized hold of the panther's head, and, after a fierce "tussel," broke its hold on the hound. The panther now turned on Repzs. A long and desperate encounter ensued between the hunter, panther, and the dog. At last Repzs succeeded in keeping the animal's nose under water until it was quite dead, after which he drew the body to the shore and fainted from his wounds and exhaustion. The hunter was severely lacerated in the conflict, and has scarcely been able to leave his bed since. The hound is also badly torn.

POOR JACK PROTECTED.

Meeting of American Ship-Masters in San Francisco—No More Bounties to be Paid.

From the San Francisco Bulletin, Dec. 9.

The fight over the seamen goes bravely on. Col. Stevenson, the "sailors' friend," is aroused, and has determined to fight the old shipping-masters and the boarding-house keepers to the end. He wanted the sailor himself to get the $40 bounty; but the boarding-house keepers said it belonged to them; they procured all the crews, and no man could get a berth who would not submit to their dictation. They always selected the men from their own boarding-houses, and no outsider could get a place. Then Col. Stevenson advertised for 100 men, and he at once had more offers than he could supply places. The English ship-masters then declared they would no longer pay bounty, whereupon the boarding-house combination resolved to put up wages to $50 per month. The last move in the game was made Saturday, at the office of Col. Stevenson, United States Shipping Commissioner, where a meeting of American Captains was held. They were a fine-looking body of men, not much given to talking, but ready for action; so that when Col. Stevenson explained the situation of affairs, and stated what he thought was necessary to be done, they quietly acquiesced. One of the Captains stated that a number of men had offered to ship with him for $20 bounty, and he believed enough could be obtained without any bounty at all. Col. Stevenson stated that the bounties were all divided between two ship-masters and sixteen boarding-house keepers, the ship-masters getting $20 and the boarding-house keepers $40. He said one of the ship-masters had offered to divide the entire bounty with him, (Stevenson,) giving the boarding-house fellows the go-by; but, of course, the Colonel had indignantly repudiated the arrangement. Some Captains, he assured Stevenson, had taken from him (the complaint of the plaintiff in applying to his client's brother, forcing her way into the Langham Hotel, and demanding more money than had been agreed upon, the allowance of £30 a month would have been continued, and no necessity would have arisen for this public investigation.

At the conclusion of Sergt. Parry's address, Mr. Justice Ballantine said, from the difficulty of resisting a verdict against him on the action for breach of promise, which was all he had to contend for, he had agreed on the part of the plaintiff to take £1,500.

The Lord Chief-Justice expressed an opinion that the compensation was very inadequate.

A juror was then withdrawn. The plaintiff is to be paid £1,500 under a Judge's order.

The University of Virginia to Harvard University.

The authorities of Harvard have lately received the following letter:

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF CHAIRMAN, Dec. 6, 1872.

President Charles W. Eliot, Harvard College:

DEAR SIR: In behalf of the Faculty of the University of Virginia, I beg to express our profound sympathy with the authorities of Harvard in their recent loss. A disaster to Harvard is a national calamity. We trust that the wise liberality of the benefactors of the higher culture of America will more than restore her losses by the Boston fire, and that speedily. With great respect, yours very truly,

Chairman of the Faculty.

Dudley Observatory.

The following card is published in the Albany journals:

Mr. Clarence Sterling, with the permission of the trustees and director, proposes to give his time to the observatory, confining his work especially to the spectroscope and photography; departments which have not, heretofore, been pursued at this observatory, owing to the want of instruments. Careful observations with the spectroscope are very important in the solution of many astronomical problems; and, in the opinion of the director, such observations would enhance the value of astronomical investigations. The director of the observatory will be responsible for all its scientific work and investigations.

A Very Singular Story About an Old-Fashioned Clock.

From the Boston Herald, Dec. 18.

Fourteen years ago, an old lady in Portland, Me., fell dead from heart disease while winding up an old-fashioned clock. The time was ten minutes before ten in the morning. Ever since that the clock has stopped at 10 o'clock on the anniversary of her death. It has never once failed in the fourteen years that have passed.

The San Francisco Money Market.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 18.—Efforts have been made for the past few days to create an impression that certain bankers and speculators were working to create a corner in the money market of this city. Up to the present time, the schemers have not succeeded in causing any panic. There is no remarkable stringency in the money market, and the conspirators will doubtless be foiled.

The Illinois Penitentiary a Profitable Investment.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 18.—The annual report of the Warden and Commissioners of the Illinois Penitentiary, just sent to Gov. Palmer, shows that the plan adopted a year since at the suggestion of the Governor, of leasing the labor of convicts at a certain price per diem to contractors, has worked most beneficially, inasmuch as the penitentiary has become self-sustaining, a state of affairs that never before existed.

Final Meeting of the Greeley and Brown Central Campaign Club.

A meeting of the Greeley and Brown Central Campaign Club, composed of Germans, was held in Fourteenth-street, last evening, Prof. Glaubenskiee presiding. A report of the financial Committee of the Club on the expenses of the late campaign was read and adopted, and the Club adjourned sine die. Resolutions were adopted accepting the platform of the Cincinnati Convention, approved at Baltimore by the Democracy, as the future political creed of the organization. A committee of five was appointed to confer with the German Democratic Union, and other organizations, to form a central organization for reform in national, State, City, and County political affairs.

Prevention Against Setting Steamers on Fire.

In consequence of the numerous fires which have of late taken place on board steamships, the Narragansett Steam-ship Company, yesterday, caused the following notice to be nailed on their steamers Old Colony and Empire State, which have taken the place of the Bristol and Providence for the Winter season:

No smoking allowed on this boat, except on the main deck, aft the stairway leading to the main saloon. Any employe of the Company found smoking on a boat laid up or under repairs, is liable to instant dismissal.

A. P. BACON, Superintendent.

The Boulevard Extension.

The Commissioners for the boulevard extension above One Hundred and Fifty-fifth-street, running through Washington Heights, met yesterday to hear the views of parties interested in or affected by this proceeding. The Commissioners listened to the views of a considerable number, among whom were Isaac P. Martin, Seth C. Hawley, E. K. Willard, Joseph Potter, B. L. Ackerman, and the representatives of the Cantenden and James Gordon Bennett estates. No valuations were placed upon the property. It was decided, however, that by express authority of the law, one-half of whatever expense may be incurred shall be assessed on the City at large.

LOVE'S REDRESS.

A Breach of Promise Case With an American Defendant.

In the Court of Queen's Bench, on Dec. 4, says the London Daily News, the case of Dredge vs. Winans was brought to a close. Mr. Serjt. Ballantine and Mr. H. Lewis were for the plaintiff; Mr. Serjt. Parry and Mr. Murphy were for the defendant. This was an action for breach of promise of marriage, in which the damages were laid at £10,000, and the details of which were unfit for publication in our columns. It may be briefly stated that the plaintiff, Elizabeth Dredge, was in 1865 engaged as book-keeper and assistant at the establishment of Messrs. Truefitt, hairdressers and perfumers, in Bond-street and Burlington-arcade, and became acquainted, as a customer, with the defendant, Clinton Winans, an American resident in this country, and one of a firm of brothers carrying on business in London, and proprietors of what are called the "cigar ships." He, it was said, visited Truefitt's almost daily, paid the plaintiff attention, and offered her marriage. She consented, but the union was put off from time to time, until, as he said, his brother had settled an income upon him. In the meantime he pressed her to become his mistress, which she did. They lived together in fashionable style as Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Davidson, in Manchester-street, Manchester-square, and in October, 1867, a child was born. The intimacy continued until some time before the 15th of September, 1869, when the defendant married a widow, a Mrs. Smith, who was represented to have an income of £6,000 a year. An allowance varying in amount from £20 to £35 a month was continued for some time, and the intimacy with the plaintiff was renewed three months after the defendant's marriage.

Mr. Serjt. Parry, for the defendant, expressed his deep regret that the case had ever been brought into Court, and, admitting that the plaintiff had a moral claim, and her child every claim on his client. But for the unreasonable conduct of the plaintiff in applying to his client's brother, forcing her way into the Langham Hotel, and demanding more money than had been agreed upon, the allowance of £30 a month would have been continued, and no necessity would have arisen for this public investigation.

At the conclusion of Serjt. Parry's address, Mr. Justice Ballantine said, from the difficulty of resisting a verdict against him on the action for breach of promise, which was all he had to contend for, he had agreed on the part of the plaintiff to take £1,500.

The Lord Chief-Justice expressed an opinion that the compensation was very inadequate.

A juror was then withdrawn. The plaintiff is to be paid £1,500 under a Judge's order.

The University of Virginia to Harvard University.

The authorities of Harvard have lately received the following letter:

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF CHAIRMAN, Dec. 6, 1872.

President Charles W. Eliot, Harvard College:

DEAR SIR: In behalf of the Faculty of the University of Virginia, I beg to express our profound sympathy with the authorities of Harvard in their recent loss. A disaster to Harvard is a national calamity. We trust that the wise liberality of the benefactors of the higher culture of America will more than restore her losses by the Boston fire, and that speedily. With great respect, yours very truly,

CHARLES S. VENABLE,
Chairman of the Faculty.

THE STOKES TRIAL.

Getting a Jury—Three Obtained—Mr. Fellows Explains.

The trial of Edward S. Stokes for the murder of James Fisk, Jr., was commenced in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, before Douglas Boardman, Judge of the Supreme Court. His counsel were Messrs. Lyman Tremain, John D. Townsend, and John R. Dos Passos. The prosecution was represented by Assistant District-Attorney Fellows on the part of the people, and Messrs. Fullerton and Beach as private counsel. The day was consumed in an effort to obtain a jury, and both sides evinced a disposition to oppose no obstacle, About thirty jurors were examined, and only three were accepted. A few were challenged peremptorily, but the majority were excused for having formed and expressed opinions on the published reports of the shooting.

The names of the jurors who were impaneled are David S. Eggleston, merchant, No. 166 South-street; Charles S. Loper, retired merchant, No. 62 Varick-street, and Theodore Mallaby, No. 134 Waverley-place.

During the proceedings, Assistant District-Attorney Fellows, addressing the Court, said:

I desire to call your attention to a matter personal to myself, which, it seems to me, that a just and decorous administration of justice demands at my hands. It is fair to your Honor, it is essentially fair to this prisoner, it is simple justice to myself, that I should call your attention to a statement made in one of the daily journals of this City this morning. With your Honor I have not had the honor of a personal acquaintance until you came to preside over this trial. You, therefore, know but little of my character or my habits. Those who know me best, know that, since I have held official position here, I have not accustomed myself to notice or reply to the criticisms of public journals upon my conduct or my method of administering the affairs appertaining to me in an official capacity. I have preferred that my acts should speak for themselves, and I know that, however powerful this agency and instrumentality of the Press may be, the persons who control it, the editors who write these articles, the gentlemen who furnish this news, are fallible human beings like myself, as liable to err in judgment, upon any matter to be presented to them, as I am, and whose opinions are no worthier of regard than that of any other gentlemen of equal position and intelligence who may occupy any other capacity or vocation in life. I believe officials in the action of which there is a fair matter for public criticism; but when it is presented in such a manner as seems calculated to hinder or obstruct the administration of justice, when it is calculated to prejudice the trial of a case, especially when it taints the character of one who appears to try such an important matter as this is, it is but fair that a response should be made to it. I will read the article, but I do not care to present the name of the journal in which it appears; that is not material:

"All that Stokes can ask today is a fair and impartial trial. There should be no use of the money of Fisk to secure conviction, and no clamor of Fisk's friends to insure that result. Nor should Fisk's notorious character incline the Court or the jury to look with lenency which the facts, as proved, do not warrant, upon the act charged upon Stokes. The highest prosecuting officer of the County should conduct the trial, for to do this kind of work he was elected. There, can, therefore, be no foundation for the suggestion which is afoot, that Fellows, a discreditable person, is to be used, if manifestly he should not do it; for, did he not bend over the coffin of Fisk, with his face suffused with tears, and exclaim, 'Good by, dear boy, good by! You was always a true and steadfast friend to me'? Can those whose relations with Fisk were such as to justify such language on such an occasion, is hardly a proper person to conduct the trial of Fisk's alleged murderer."

Now, your Honor, it is unfortunately too true that very much of the criticism and comment upon the actions of persons charged with official responsibilities grows out of that prejudice, either political or personal, to which editors of newspapers, like all other men, are, I suppose, subject, and of which they may, no more than any other men, divest themselves. My purpose in calling attention to this matter is simply because your Honor may have read it; the prisoner undoubtedly has, and I have read it; some of those gentlemen who will serve as jurors upon this case have read it; it is but just to your Honor, presiding in this high character over this high tribunal, that you should know whether the person who appears as the official representative of the people of the State upon the prosecution of this indictment is a person properly subject to these imputations. My relations with Mr. Fisk were nothing like as intimate as they were with the prisoner at the bar. With that man I never had any business transaction of any kind or character in my life. I had been introduced to him, and two or three times I was informed by him—always, I believe, the times I met him, that I remember, were in connection with the litigations that were then going on between the prisoner at the bar and Mr. Fisk, or in which the prisoner at the bar was a witness, rather than a principal—where I appeared on the part of the County, and which I was trying to arrange amicably between these parties. I say that my relations with Mr. Fisk were nothing like as intimate as they were with Mr. Stokes. As to the language and action attributed to me over his coffin, it is wholly false, and the gentleman who penned that paragraph has been entirely misinformed. I am not likely on any occasion, outside of my own family, to give way to such ebullitions of feeling, and it is sufficient for me to say that nothing of the kind occurred. Mr. Fisk's remains were lying in state in the rooms of the Erie office, the Grand Opera-house, of this City, and with thousands of others I passed by his coffin as I passed by the coffin of a distinguished gentleman lately lying in state at the City Hall, casting a glance at the features and nothing more. I have been associated in business relations, I have received kindnesses at the hands of the prisoner at the bar. I have not felt that it would be proper in me to call upon him or communicate with him since his incarceration, because I was one of the public prosecutors of this County, and I did not know but I might be called upon to act in my official capacity. I only desire to relieve myself from the unjust and scandalous imputations cast upon me by this article."

Count Joannes excitedly jumping to his feet, screamed out: "Who is the writer? I think it is your duty to name the newspaper, and not by your silence to stigmatize others."

Mr. FELLOWS—I have no desire to name the journal. I desire to vindicate myself only.

Judge BOARDMAN—The article alluded to has not come under my notice, but the explanation which has been made is very appropriate, and is justified entirely by the nature of the article which has been read. It would give me great pleasure, and I take the occasion to say so, if the newspaper Press of this City would avoid any commentaries, during the progress of this trial, upon the manner in which it has been conducted or upon the merits of this case. It is, unfortunately, too true that, in the enterprise and activity that stimulates newspaper men to get readable articles, or articles which will sell the papers or attract attention, they are too much disposed to say things that may be injurious to the proper administration of justice; and, while it is impossible for me to control these things, I respectfully ask that it would give me great pleasure if, in these instances, the Press would observe a decorous silence as to the merits of this case, or the matters and interests involved in it, leaving it until after the case is disposed of, and if then they have any comments to make, it would come very appropriately, and do no harm.

The Dividend on Erie Preferred Stock.

A meeting of Erie Directors was held at S. L. M. Barlow's office in William-street yesterday. It is understood that the question of the payment of a dividend upon the $8,000,000 of preferred stock was the chief topic of discussion. The Atlantic and Great Western Railroad interest in London, by which Erie is chiefly controlled in this City, is urgent that a dividend shall be declared upon the preferred stock, either "cooked" or otherwise. The earnings of the road, however, do not warrant such a proceeding, and Mr. P. H. Watson, President of the Company, will not sanction it unless the money can be obtained legitimately. Several of the Erie Directors favor this view of the question, and the fight in regard to the dividend is likely to result in its not being declared. Erie declined to 42¾ in London upon receipt of the news that the Company would not declare a dividend.

The Delayed Steam-Ship Adriatic.

A cable dispatch from Liverpool to the agent of the White Star line, in this City, today, announces the arrival at that port of a steamer which spoke the Adriatic, of the White Star line, 1,500 miles from Sandy Hook, having lost two blades of her propeller, which will probably delay her arrival here three or four days. The Adriatic rescued the crew of the Ailing, making the third shipwrecked crew saved by the steamers of this line within a month. In consequence of this accident, the White Star line will not dispatch a steamer on next Saturday. All on board the Adriatic are reported well, and with the exception of the accident alluded to, everything was working satisfactorily.

Disposal of Criminals in the Court of General Sessions.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Recorder Hackett disposed of the following cases: Charles Law, for highway robbery, was sent to the State Prison for five years; Joseph Lawson, a waiter, burglary, three years and six months' imprisonment; Patrick Conway pleaded guilty to a felonious assault, and sentence was suspended; Jennie Williamson, colored, grand larceny, two years and six months' imprisonment. A motion for a new trial or admission to bail of Frederick Heggi, charged with poisoning F. J. Siegfried, was set down for the January Term. August Wood, a Swede, charged with willful murder in having stabbed George Wood, on the 13th of June, entered a plea of manslaughter on the ground that he two men, while intoxicated, were fighting in front of his house. The prisoner was knocked down and violently kicked by his opponent, upon which some persons separated them. The accused walked to a distance of fifty or sixty feet, and called after the deceased. The two came together again, and the struggle was renewed, when the prisoner was stabbed with a sheath-knife. He was sentenced to seven years with hard labor in the State Prison. Joseph Parker, charged with petit larceny, was acquitted.

THE HARLEM COURT-HOUSE.

The Frauds Further Investigated—McBride Davidson Again.

The Harlem Court-house investigation was continued yesterday at the City Hall, by Senators Tiemann and Weismann, assisted by John E. Parsons and C. H. Hitchel, counsel for the Committee. Mr. H. Genet was present, accompanied by ex-Judge Waterbury.

Mr. Parsons said he did not wish to take the testimony of Mr. Genet, who, from the beginning of this investigation, had defied the Committee and refused to be examined when called upon.

Mr. Waterbury understood the gentleman wished to examine Mr. Genet. As for himself, he would decide in a few days whether to examine him or not.

Senator TIEMANN—We can't sit here forever.

Mr. Waterbury said that Mr. Genet had acted under the advice of counsel. He thought all the other testimony should be exhausted before the Committee examine Mr. Genet.

Mr. KITCHELL—He could hardly have acted under the advice of counsel when he destroyed a subpœna in the presence of the Committee.

Senator TIEMANN—Yes. If that had been any other man, a warrant would have been issued for his arrest.

Mr. PARSONS—If Mr. Genet is satisfied with the shape in which this testimony leaves him, we are content.

Mr. Genet will probably be examined at the next session of the Committee.

Mr. Samuel B. Pike, of Saratoga Springs, called by Mr. Waterbury, gave the following testimony:

I am the counsel of J. McBride Davidson, whom I saw at Saratoga during July and August, 1871, at the time of the races.

Q.—Do you remember the publication in the TIMES newspaper of this City of any articles in reference to the New-York frauds during that Summer? A.—I do: I remember the commencement of their publication.

Q.—Did you read the articles as they appeared? A.—Every one of them, as I take the TIMES every day.

Q.—Did Mr. Davidson consult you about matters relating to these alleged frauds? A.—He did; and about the same time he commenced me on matters relating to the Harlem Court-house; he told me the nature of that transaction, whereupon I advised him not to receive the money offered to him, or have anything to do with the transaction, as the parties had put him in such a position that he would not have to do much with the City and County of New-York: this was soon after the publication of those articles; perhaps two or three weeks after; Mr. Davidson was very excited about that time.

Q.—Do you remember whether Mr. Davidson had he has communicated what you said to him to Mr. Genet? A.—He stated that he saw Mr. Genet and declined to receive the money for the reasons upon which I had based my advice: Mr. Davidson told me, as near as I can recollect, that Mr. Genet called upon him to give him an opportunity of supplying to the Harlem Court-house some of his goods, and that this was done on the solicitation of some party outside; that Mr. Genet called there and proposed to furnish orders to the Court-house, and he desired to furnish the goods, but would have nothing to do with supplying the City or County anything without his pay. Mr. Genet told him to make out his bill for what he would furnish, and he would then give a statement of Mr. Genet, who said he would get upon it the money for him, and he was to deliver the goods when the money came; I don't recollect whether Mr. Davidson used any language to me in saying that he had seen Genet; Mr. Genet to do this; Mr. Davidson told him to take the statement, and Mr. Genet told him he would get the money upon it, and he told him to do so; that is my recollection of the matter.

On his cross-examination Mr. Pike said he understood Mr. Davidson was to receive the money before he had delivered the goods for it; the goods were to be delivered on the receipt of the money; and, in answer to further questions, the witness said: Mr. Davidson told me that Mr. Genet came to his store, offered him the money, and asked for the goods; I advised him to have nothing to do with it, and he followed my advice; Mr. Davidson did not inform me that Mr. Genet's position was that of counsel in the transaction; I understood that Mr. Genet held some relation to the Court-house; that he could get for Mr. Davidson jobs upon it, and that some gentlemen in this City had spoken to him to get some work there; Mr. Davidson did not communicate to me how Mr. Genet was to be compensated for all this trouble in judging from the bad habits of the City of New-York, I supposed there was compensation somewhere, and that was the reason I gave the advice: I inferred that there could be no transaction in the City of New-York without compensation somewhere; Mr. Genet, I supposed, held a pretty high position in Tammany, both before and since these frauds came to light, and, being a Republican, I thought that was sufficient to hurt any man. [Mr. Genet laughed heartily.] Mr. Davidson never informed me what Mr. Genet did with the money, but I understood it was left in Mr. Genet's hands; the amount was upward of $4,000.

John Kelly, a stone-cutter, called by Mr. Trull, testified relative to the horse-block in front of Judge McQuade's house, to the effect that Judge McQuade paid him for the work done upon it.

The Committee then adjourned.

THE BURNED WOMEN.

Commencement of the Coroner's Inquest on the Bodies of the Servant-Women Burned at the Fifth-Avenue Hotel.

The inquest on the bodies of the victims of the recent fire at the Fifth-avenue Hotel was commenced, yesterday, by Coroner Schirmer. The testimony was nearly the same as that taken by the Fire-Marshal, and but few new facts were elicited. Two of the guests, Messrs. E. D. Russ and Lyman Jewell, testified to the promptness of the employes of the hotel in bringing the hose to bear on the burning elevator, the former testifying to coming in at 10:57 P. M., and hearing the alarm, seeing the hose at work almost simultaneously. The engines of the Fire Department arrived at 11:20 P. M., the alarm being sent out immediately on the discovery that the fire was making its way upward along the stairway.

Mr. W. Bouton, the engineer of the hotel, described the locality of the fire as follows:

"There are rooms on each landing of the spiral staircase, some being used as sleeping apartments and others for storage; the laundry elevator, which is cased in wood, runs through these rooms from top to bottom; I think the fire originated in Room No. 505, on the landing between the second and third floors; we have two large and one small pumps, with two and a half inch connections on every floor, with from fifty to one hundred feet of hose to each; the wire screens were ordered to be sent for by removal; there were between fifty and sixty female servants in the attic at the time of the fire."

Fire-Marshal Scheydon, who examined the premises the day after the fire, was next sworn, and gave his opinion as an expert that the elevator should have had an opening on the roof to draw up the smoke; as they stood, the elevator and staircase were dangerous to the occupants of the upper rooms, as they drew up the smoke, and caused its spread on reaching the ceiling; the staircase, however, would be a safe means of escape to the corridor below in case of fire on the roof or originating in the attic. The elevator, however, was dangerous to all rooms on its line; I think the fire originated in Room No. 505, and I cannot trace it either to incendiarism or neglect.

Mary Graves deposed that the flames first rushed in her room, stating that she first saw fire coming in through a window opening on the staircase; when she reached the floor below the men were at work fixing on the hose.

Mr. J. W. Macgregor, Superintendent of Buildings, stated that he inspected the Fifth-avenue Hotel on Jan. 3, 1871, shortly after the Richmond fire; found it built in accordance with law, and regarded the attic as safe; suggested an iron bridge from the floor below to the next roof, which was put up, but the proprietors had been unable to get the fire-alarm which he recommended on account of some trouble about the patents.

The inquest was then adjourned to Saturday next, at 7 o'clock P. M.

John F. Kensett's Funeral—Scenes in the Academy of Design.

John F. Kensett's remains were laid in state in the Academy of Design building, Fourth-avenue, from 10 o'clock A. M. until noon yesterday. The body was inclosed in a rosewood casket, massively mounted in silver. The plate bore the inscription: "John F. Kensett, born March 22, 1816, died Dec. 14, 1872." Wreaths of exotic flowers and garlands of roses were placed around the casket. At the head was a portrait of Mr. Kensett, owned by Mr. R. M. Olyphant, which was tastefully decorated with flowers.

Rev. Mr. Flagg, formerly an artist and academician, performed a short service in the council-room of the Academy. The many artists present, in fact all the prominent painters in the City, evinced the utmost sorrow. The body was then taken to the Fifth-avenue Presbyterian Church, corner of Nineteenth-street. The pall-bearers were Daniel Huntington, Worthington Whittemore, John W. Casilear, Sanford R. Gifford, Thomas Hicks, Richard W. Hubbard, Vincent Collyer, Jervis McEntee, Henry K. Brown, John M. Falconer, Robert Hoe, and George Talbot Olyphant. A voluntary was played by the organist, O. B. Boise, and the quartet sung. "Watch, for Ye Know not the Hour." Rev. Dr. Hall delivered a feeling address, and Dr. Ormiston gave the prayer. Mr. Kensett's mother and other members of his family were present. The body was then taken to the Reception Cemetery, in Second-street, whence they were removed to Green-Wood. During the services in the church, Miss Helen Holmes, an artist, had her pocket picked of $68 by some sacrilegious thief, who escaped.

A Chapter of Serious Accidents.

Yesterday, while Valentine Kraft, aged sixty-four, of Sixty-eighth-street and Eighth-avenue, and Joseph Fisher, aged thirty-five, of No. 440 West Thirty-second-street, were engaged in erecting a scaffold at No. 112 Fourth-avenue, the plank on which they were standing gave way and they were precipitated to the cellar. Kraft sustained a fracture of one of his legs. Fisher escaped with slight bruises.

Phillip Stevens, of No. 211 Delancey-street, was seriously injured yesterday, while at work at the new building in Tryon-row, and was taken to the Park Hospital.

Peter Gutman, aged sixteen, of No. 456 Ninth-avenue, had both his feet terribly crushed by being caught in a printing press while at work at No. 89 Liberty-street. He was removed to Park Hospital.

Stephen Murphy, aged forty, a fisherman, residing at Noank, Conn., was seriously injured about the head by a pully block falling upon him while at work on the fishing-smack James Potter, at Pier No. 23 East River. He was taken to Park Hospital.

Patrick Farrell, aged twenty-seven, of No. 224 Sullivan-street, was seized with a fit while driving a truck at the corner of Wall and New streets, and falling to the pavement was seriously injured about the head.

DR. IRISH'S TRIAL.

The trial of Dr. Lucuis B. Irish was resumed, yesterday, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, Brooklyn. Mrs. Anderson was brought into Court by the writ of habeas corpus, and remained seated among her female friends during the day. She was attired in deep mourning, and was closely veiled. During the examination of Mrs. Abby Wyman, who was speaking of the death and funeral of Mr. Anderson, Mrs. Anderson sobbed hysterically, causing sympathy among the females, who exhibited their emotion in tears. Judge Pratt will give a decision today on the admission of Mrs. Anderson's testimony. Counsel anticipate that the trial will be prolonged until next Monday or Tuesday, though the general feeling is that the prosecution is already broken down. Dr. Irish and his friends seem to be cheerfully impressed with this fact.

Mrs. Irene Anderson, a sister-in-law of the deceased, testified to the affectionate relations that existed between Mr. Anderson and his wife; she saw Mr. Anderson take some white powder; asked him if he was taking medicine; he replied "No;" he had suffered with dyspepsia for a long time.

A long array of witnesses were examined with reference to Anderson's drinking habits, and his complaints resulting therefrom; to the fondness of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson for each other, and the friendship that existed between the families of Mr. Anderson and Dr. Irish.

Dr. Bird was examined with regard to arsenical poisons and their various antidotes, but failed to throw much light on the subject. He said, however, there was poison contained in a great deal of the liquor ordinarily sold for drinking.

Seven or eight lady witnesses were examined, who testified that the doctor was a man of exceedingly tender feelings and very kind-hearted. They also, together with several male witnesses, gave the doctor a very good character.

Wm. H. Barr, of Mount Vernon, Westchester County, N. Y., testified to his boyhood; had not seen much of him during late years. In 1856 or 1857 Anderson attempted to commit suicide by drowning.

The Court then adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE...WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 18, 1872.

The Alleged Child Murder in Manhattanville.

Drs. O'Leary and Truchsess, of Manhattanville, made affidavits, at the Coroner's office, yesterday, in relation to the death of the child of Terance Dolan, who is alleged to have been fatally burned by being put on a red-hot stove by his father. Dr. O'Leary testified that Dolan, who lives in Lawrence-street, Manhattanville, called on him and stated that while drunk, on the 9th inst., he let the child slip on the stove, which was red-hot at the time. The physician called and found the child severely burned about the hands and back. The boy died two days after, and Dr. Truchsess, who gave a certificate of death from inflammation of the brain, induced from teething, states that he observed the burns on the child, but not regarding them as the immediate cause of death, made no mention in his certificate.

THE HOLIDAY BOOKS.

The Publications of Scribner, Armstrong & Co., D. Appleton & Co.—Publications of Other Houses—A Superb Display of Fine-Art Works.

In entering the establishment of Messrs. Scribner, Armstrong & Co., and of Scribner, Welford & Armstrong, No. 654 Broadway, one is almost deluded into the belief that he is going into a carefully-arranged library. The shelves on either side are filled with the choicest works in the finest styles of binding, while the tables, ranged in the centre of the room, glitter with the showy array of superbly-illustrated works. There are old and rare books innumerable, and the works of historians, poets, and essayists, bound in every style, from the common cloth to costly morocco, to the collection of which Mr. Welford, the partner resident in London, has devoted his untiring energy and his wide knowledge of what is scarce, curious, and valuable in literature. Books in such wide variety, ranging from an illustrated Bible catalogued at $750, or a Cruikshankiana worth $300, to a toy-book which sells for twenty-five cents, it will be difficult to find elsewhere.

Messrs. Scribner, Armstrong & Co., the publishing branch of this well-known concern, have brought out for this holiday season several exceedingly attractive works. The Songs of Nature, which is the fourth and last volume of the reissue of Folk Songs, itself the leading favorite among poetical anthologies, is illustrated with numerous new designs by Moran, Miss Hallock, Miss Lydyard, and others, and with autographs of R. W. Emerson, Dr. Holland, Bret Harte, and Mrs. Whitney. Songs of the Heart, Songs of Life, and Songs of Home, the three preceding issues of this same work with the last, make up a collection of poetry of genuine value. Among other illustrated works we may name Garnered Sheaves, the beautiful red-line edition of Dr. Holland's complete poetical works, with handsome additions of Kathrina and Bitter Sweet, and that superb folio, Floral Belles, a monument to Mrs. Badger's love of nature and her untiring skill in depicting its beauties. Roundabout Rambles, with its 200 illustrations and fascinating letter-press, we warmly commended when it was issued a few weeks since, as the very best book of the season for young readers, and nothing has since appeared which excels it. Among the other works issued by Messrs. Scribner, Armstrong & Co., for the holidays of a general of a class which last far beyond the year of their publication, we may invite attention to the famous "Wonder Books." The first series of twenty volumes is supplied in a handsome black-walnut rack for $30, and of the new series five volumes have thus far been published. The "Library of Travel" now numbers five volumes, and these are supplied in a box together. Such works as these are a source of joy and profit to their fortunate possessors far beyond the Christmas season. And in connection with works of travel Stanley's How I Found Livingstone, published by this same house, deserves prominent mention. It may be procured through the agents of the house, and is a work which cannot fail to be devoured with the most eager interest. The numerous standard works included in the list of Messrs. Scribner, Armstrong & Co.'s publications give a wide field of selection to those who wish to buy the best. Froude's History of England, his Short Studies, and History of Ireland, Mommsen's Rome, Curtius' Greece, Max Muller's, Prof. Whitney's, and Hon. George P. Marsh's works on language and literature, &c.; all may be had in fine bindings. Among religious works are Lange's Commentary, fifteen volumes, as published, the Speaker's Commentary, (the Pentateuch, in one volume, is all of this work thus far issued,) Dr. Hodge's Theology, which is just complete by the issue of volume III, and, last in time for the holiday season, The Minister's Library, which includes some of the best works of the best authors for whom Messrs. Scribner, Armstrong & Co. publish. This series of works, which, if purchased singly, would cost $50, are supplied for $30 in this form. It is a rare chance for ministers to add to their libraries some of the most valuable works ever published in this country, or for laymen to make a most acceptable gift to their pastors.

A year's subscription to Scribner's Monthly will prove a most acceptable gift, for its regular visits will keep the giver in grateful remembrance during the year. "Arthur Bonnicastle," Dr. Holland's new story, is deservedly attracting increasing attention for its charming portraitures of character, which must live long in American fiction. A glance at the January number of the monthly, with its really superb illustrations, and its treasures of fiction and poetry, will prove irresistible. We have already alluded in general to the abounding treasures which are to be found on the shelves of Messrs. Scribner, Welford & Armstrong, and we now only return to them to say that everything worth having which has been published in England of late years, and many works the memory of which has almost passed away, may be found there. Among the publications specially imported for this year's holiday trade are an entirely new and beautifully-illustrated edition of Reynard the Fox; Sea-gull Rock, a capital story of Brittany, with most striking illustrations; Guillemin's Forces of Nature, a superb octavo, with 450 wood-cuts, and a number of beautiful chromo lithographs; Meridiana; or, The Adventures of Three Englishmen and Three Russians in South Africa; and, besides these, art-books and books with photographic and other illustrations "too numerous to mention." As a guide to this extensive collection of books, Messrs. Scribner, Welford & Armstrong have just issued a catalogue of eighty-four pages for gratuitous distribution; and, until Christmas, to allow every facility for inspecting their stock, their establishment will remain open evenings, those who want to see "books which are books" should not fail to take advantage of this opportunity.

APPLETON & CO.

It would be superfluous in speaking of the firm of Appleton & Co., to give the address of this well-known house. Every one who buys books is acquainted with their fine building on Broadway, and the magnificent stock displayed in it. During the holiday season, they have had a large demand for the finer classes of works, and the specimens of these displayed on their tables are of the finest possible description. A magnificent edition of Prescott, bound in tree calf, and with every beauty which the art of the printer and binder can give it, is shown. There are only two copies in existence, and the great cost of the work is likely to prevent any multiplication of them. The same edition bound in morocco, in less costly style, is put up in the same case with the former. A choice set of Cruikshank's works, in seven volumes, and in five volumes, small octavo, bound in tree calf, is another fine work, which has been much called for. It contains a collection of the rarest and most choice etchings and woodcuts of the great caricaturist, and the various portraits of him, one of them a colored drawing. It is a beautiful work, and makes an invaluable addition to any library. Old Sir John Froissart appears in a new and gorgeous dress. His celebrated Chronicles, as translated by Col. Johnes, are bound in two fine volumes, with illuminated titles and a large number of illustrative woodcuts. A copy of the great folio size book, the Coronation of the Emperor Alexander, of Russia, is among the rarities of the establishment. It contains the portraits of all the celebrated personages who attended the ceremony, and was done by the order of the Emperor. Only a limited number of copies were prepared, and these were given by the Emperor to the foreign Ambassadors present on the occasion. Another art treasure of rare beauty is the French work on early book-ornamentation. It contains sixty-five large plates, exhibiting specimens of richly ornamented early book-bindings, illuminated manuscripts, drawings by Raphael, Michael Angelo, and other celebrated masters, and designs from antique works in gold and ivory. The descriptions are in English and French, and the colored plates are beautiful examples of fine printing. Only 150 copies of this work were executed. Among other art works may be mentioned McJan's Costumes of the Highland Clans, Lake and River Scenery in Switzerland, an exquisite book, with tinted illustrations; The Book of Gems, illustrated with 150 fine engravings after Turner, Eastlake, Collins, and others, and bound in superb style; The Rembrandt Gallery, a collection of the works of that celebrated artist; Westminster Abbey, with photographic illustrations; Hogarth's Works, with many subjects never before collected; The Italian School of Design, and Murphy's Arabian Antiquities of Spain. This book is an invaluable aid to any student of the Moorish dominion in the Spanish peninsula. Its illustrations of the architecture and paintings of that era are especially beautiful, and give a complete idea of those arts, as practiced by the Arabian conquerors. All these works, and hundreds of others of the same character, were purchased by the Messrs. Appleton in London, and are some of the finest books ever issued from the English presses. The number of editions of Shakespeare is very large. There is the famous Boydell edition, with engravings from the paintings of Stothard, Westall, Opie, and Fuseli; the Variorum edition, with the corrections and illustrations of various commentators; Staunton's fac simile reprint of the first folio edition, 1623; the edition of Dyce, the copy which belonged to Richard Grant White; Charles Knight's pictorial edition, and the scarce Shakespeare Novels, stories of the early youth of the poet. Scott appears in the fine Abbotsford edition of his Waverley novels. This edition is in twenty-five volumes, bound in tree calf, and crowded with fine steel engravings and wood-cuts. Grote's History of Greece, Gladstone's Homer, British Poets, and the Speeches of British Statesmen appear among books of a standard class. The last-named work is a library in itself. There are sixty-three volumes, containing the speeches of the most eminent British orators, from Pitt and Fox to Bright and Brougham. One art work, we had almost forgotten to mention, is David Roberts' Views in the Holy Land and Adjoining Countries. It is intended especially for the library of the theological student, but may well find a place on the drawing-room table beside the many other fine works issued by this firm.

SUTTON & CO.

Messrs. Sutton & Co. devote their energies to one well-known publication. The Aldine, as it comes from their hands, is a credit to American fine-art printing, and now in its sixth year, gives evidence of a steady improvement, which, if continued, as there is every promise that it will be, will soon place this excellent art journal on a level with the best art publications of London and Paris. So steadily has it advanced, and so earnest has been the desire of its proprietors to secure the best talent, that some of the leading artists of the country now willingly contribute designs for its pages. We were permitted to examine the sheets of the forthcoming number of the Aldine, and the illustrations are among the finest which have appeared in it since the issue of the first number. The two fine chromos which will be given to subscribers have already been noticed in the TIMES. These are printed by a new process, as effective in all respects, but much more certain and rapid than the old system; and by carrying out improvements in this, which have been projected, Mr. Sutton is confident that he will be able to publish chromos equal to the best now on the market with every issue of the Aldine. Nothing about this excellent publication is done in a hasty or slipshod manner. Everything bears the marks of the utmost care and skill; and, apart from the illustrations, the printing itself is a model of workmanship, the result of unceasing care and skillful manipulation.

CASSELL, PETTER & GALPIN.

The firm of Cassell, Petter & Galpin, No. 596 Broadway, is well known on both sides of the Atlantic. To this enterprising firm we owe the splendid editions of Milton, Dante, Tennyson, and Don Quixote, as illustrated by Doré. These works have obtained a world-wide fame, and may be found wherever books are sold. A new book has just been issued by them, with Doré's illustrations. It is a collection of the most popular fairy tales, such as are most familiar to our infancy, and probably have delighted the youth of every nation of Europe. The illustration of these stories appears to have been a labor of love to the eminent French artist, and they display some of the most charming traits of his genius. The illustrations of the tale of The Sleeping Princess, which Tennyson has put into numbers, are exquisite drawings. The group of hundreds and dogs, sleeping at the gate of the enchanted palace, the entrance scene in the banqueting hall, the chamber of the sleeping beauty, and the enchanted palace itself, weird and half-shrouded in the sombre shadows of the surrounding trees, tells the story as completely as the text itself. This book is one of the most charming of the holiday series. Several other works recently published by this firm promise to enjoy a wide popularity as holiday presents.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS.

The New-York agency of this well-known London firm is at No. 416 Broome-street, where all the publications of the London house may be found. Their catalogue of holiday books is a large and good one, and contains many splendid works of art. The British School of Sculpture is one of the best. It is illustrated, in addition to numerous fine wood-cuts, with twenty steel engravings, exquisitely executed, of the finest works of deceased masters, with a preliminary essay and notices of the artists by William B. Scott. Murillo and the Spanish School of Painting, with engravings on steel and wood-cuts; Pictures by Charles Robert Leslie, R. A., in the same style; and the Gems of Modern German Art, fac-similes, photographic from the pictures of modern German artists, are all works of the same class. They are perfect gems of art printing, and make one hunger to possess them. Then there is Tom Hood's legend of Miss Kilmansegg and her Precious Leg,

New-Hampshire Republicans hold a State Convention on the 14th of next month. The call of the State Committee is a very sensible document. It is addressed to those "who accept the settlement of the prominent issues of the last ten years as just and final," to those who supported GRANT and WILSON, and to "all who believe that honesty and efficiency, rather than political activity," should be the essential qualifications for the public service.

The community, which has been shocked by the brutal murder of DURYEA in Liberty-street, will note, with satisfaction, that Recorder HACKETT has just sent a man to hard labor for seven years for killing another in a drunken fight. The prisoner in this case was a poor Swede. DURYEA'S murderer is a rich gambler, and it will be interesting to see whether the final result will be affected by that fact.

At the Harlem Court-house investigation, yesterday, a witness stated that he "inferred that there could be no transaction in the City of New-York without compensation somewhere." As the tax-payers know, this inference was exceedingly just in regard to the transactions of the reign of TWEED, and it is, perhaps, not to be wondered at that it should not be altogether destitute of truth even now. For, even in the Departments which have been placed on a nominal basis of reform, a good many minor rogues have survived the fall of their chiefs. This is especially manifest in quarters where supplies have to be purchased for public purposes. In one and all of the Departments which make purchases not given out under contract, there is a system of "compensation," almost universal in practice, though somewhat difficult of detection. The Finance Department has for months past been engaged in a continuous struggle against the petty stealings sanctioned or participated in by purchasing clerks and other minor officials. This Department has asserted, in spite of protests in the Courts and elsewhere, its undoubted legal right to satisfy itself of the correctness and justice of every claim, small and great, which it is called on to pay. This work of supervision, necessarily tedious and difficult, may possibly have interposed some little delay in the payment of perfectly valid debts. But it is obviously calculated to be of as much ultimate benefit to tradesmen as to the tax-payers at large. It strikes at the root of corrupt favoritism in purchasing, and it preserves for public use money which would otherwise have been divided between unjust public servants, and the tradesmen in collusion with them.

The counsel of J. MCBRIDE DAVIDSON testified yesterday that his client was very much excited at the time of the publication of the fraudulent warrants in the TIMES, and that he thereupon resolved to supply no more goods to the City or County unless they were paid in advance. This recalls a circumstance which ought not to be allowed to slip out of public recollection. The great safe-maker was, doubtless, very much astounded to see what a deal of money his friends of the Ring had drawn under his name, without either his knowledge or consent. Messrs. JOHN J. DONALDSON and H. B. CLAFLIN, in their capacity of sub-committee of investigation examined, with the assistance of competent experts, the Davidson and other warrants drawn on account of Court-house work. Their opinion is on record that Mr. DAVIDSON'S signature is forged to five warrants, representing an amount of $153,660 73. A similar opinion is recorded in regard to seven warrants bearing the signature of ARCHIBALD HALL, Jr., on which some $147,000 were obtained, while in regard to eighteen warrants, bearing the indorsement of C. A. BOLLAR, the following remark is made: "The indorsements on these checks are various, and on most of them are believed not to be genuine." The moral of all which is, that the tax-payers should remember that they are no more responsible than a private firm would be for money obtained from their bank account on forged checks. The Broadway Bank and the Tenth National Bank cashed nearly all the checks above referred to. To people who have just had to pay somewhat oppressive tax bills, it would be decidedly interesting to hear how soon steps are to be taken to recover the money thus obtained. Is it for the purpose of cheating the people out of this measure of justice that a prominent bank manager has headed a very heavy subscription list to a corruption fund designed to influence the new Legislature?

By the cable, we are informed that Spain is on the eve of another Ministerial crisis—which is not startling news—and that in the French Assembly the Committee of Thirty are debating whether or not they shall go into the question of complete constitutional reconstruction. As the main business of the Committee is to save time for M. THIERS, no better question could have been proposed for it.

A letter in another column on our Currency and the Banks will be read with interest. Its author, whose name we are not at liberty to use, is a gentleman of wide experience and of great sagacity in finance.

Democrats and the City.

The public will not fail to notice that the attempt to save Mayor HAVEMEYER, a Democrat, from the clutches of a few intriguing Republicans, proceeds exclusively from Republican newspapers. With the exception of the Brooklyn Eagle, which we have generally found a fair and independent paper, no Democratic journal utters a word of protest against the trickery by which Mayor HALL proposes to turn Mr. HAVEMEYER into a mere dummy. The protests come from us alone—from us who are so often accused of being a rabid and ultra-partisan organ. We are especially speaking of morning papers—for the Evening Post has had one or two vigorous articles denouncing the schemes of the Oakey Hall Republicans. It might naturally have been thought that Democratic journals would have been foremost in the work of exposing this conspiracy. Mr. HAVEMEYER belongs to their side of the house, and it was their duty to render him all the assistance they could. We are in favor of allowing him to enter upon his duties unfettered by OAKEY HALL'S tools; since he has to be largely responsible for the management of City affairs during the next two years, it is only right that he should select the officials who are to work with him. We only ask that these officials should be honest and capable men, and that mere party consideration should be put out of sight in their appointment.

Of course, no one could expect the World to oppose any scheme of Mayor HALL. That remarkable paper advocated the infamous Code Amendments bill, which HALL was said to have drawn up, and it defended him all through 1871. To this day it has never published a line of the fraudulent accounts, which did so much to bring home to the Tammany Ring our charges of dishonesty. HALL and his friends long ago made it "all right" with the World, and even ordered it to denounce Mr. ANDREW H. GREEN, on his appointment as an accomplice of CONNOLLY, and Mr. S. J. TILDEN as a "railroad politician." From this quarter nothing could be expected, but we must say that we are disappointed in the Staats Zeitung. That excellent paper has often qualified its approbation of our course with the remark that it was not sure we would oppose Republican trickery whenever we found it going on. We were vigorous enough in attacking Democratic rogues—but how should we act when we had to carry the war into our own camp? We have now given the Staats Zeitung grounds enough on which it could form a fair opinion on that point, and we expected to see it joining with us in the attempt to secure a fair and honest government for the City. But it is silent. It is devoting itself to the discussion of "Bier and Wein," and subjects of similar moment. But it does not try to shield Mayor HAVEMEYER from the clique which is anxious to bind him hand and foot. If one of us has failed in denouncing Republican wrong-doing, it is not the TIMES, but the Staats Zeitung.

We, nevertheless, hope to gain the support of our contemporary, and to see during next year a fair attempt on the part of all honest journals to get a much better government for the City than we have had for some years past. This can only be accomplished by papers like the Evening Post, the Staats Zeitung, and others, working hand in hand, and insisting on personal integrity and capability forming the chief claims for admission to office. We shall certainly never oppose a Democrat simply because he happens to be a Democrat. It is a satisfaction to us to know that all the leading Republicans of the City—the gentlemen who hold important offices, from the Collector of the Port downward, are entirely free from any complicity in the scheme to allow OAKEY HALL to make the appointments which properly belong to Mayor HAVEMEYER. If the City is ever to be republican in its government, it will be made so by our proving that Republicans are capable of rising above purely partisan considerations, and are anxious only to promote the welfare of the great body of our citizens. In its course last election, the Republican Party gave an earnest of these intentions, and it is not injured by the foolish and selfish proceedings of a few men who hover on its outskirts.

The New Civil Service Rules.

A good deal of misapprehension exists regarding the actual requirements of the civil service rules, adopted by the President last Winter. It is generally supposed that they proceed on the principle of filling all the offices by competitive examination. On this supposition a great number of objections are urged to them, which have no more force than if they were addressed to the Darwinian hypothesis. Some of these objections come from men who ought to know better, and who are simply ignorant. Some come from men who do know better and are simply dishonest. Between the two, the people are likely to be confused, and to form a very erroneous idea of what the President actually proposes. Whether his proposition is sound or mistaken, he has a right to ask that it be judged on its merits, and not on the merits of some utterly imaginary scheme set up in its place.

The civil service rules do not, to start with, require all the offices to be filled in accordance with any rigid method. A large number of important offices are not brought under the rules at all. The thirteenth rule declares that the following officers are excepted from the rules altogether:

"Heads of Departments, Assistant Secretaries of Departments, Assistant Attorneys-General, and First Assistant Postmaster-General, Solicitor-General, Solicitor of the Treasury, Naval Solicitor, Solicitor of Internal Revenue, Examiner of Claims in the State Department, Treasurer of the United States, Register of the Treasury, First and Second Controllers of the Treasury, Judges of the United States Courts, District-Attorneys, Private Secretary of the President, Embassadors and other public Ministers, Superintendent of the Coast Survey, Director of the Mint, Governors of Territories, Special Commissioners, Special Counsel, Visiting and Examining Boards, persons appointed to positions without compensation for services, dispatch agents, and bearers of dispatches."

It is easy to see the motive of most of these exceptions. They leave the President free in the choice of those officers on whose general sympathy with his views he must depend, and in the choice of the legal officers of the Departments and of the United States Courts, and of diplomatic officers. When any of our readers, therefore, hear from the opponents of the President's reform that it ties the hands of the Executive in regard to the more important offices of the Government, they will remember these exceptions.

In the second place, the new rules do not undertake to fill any office solely by the result of a competitive examination. Such an examination is only one, and by no means the most important or the most valuable, of the tests employed to secure efficiency in the service. Where an examination is ordered, the examiners are required to name to the appointing power three of the persons who come best out of the ordeal, and it is left to the discretion of the appointing power which of these three shall be chosen. In the cases of persons entering the service, even this is not final. The examinations show three persons best qualified so far as qualification can be thus determined. From these the appointer chooses one. This one is then appointed on probation for six months. If, at the end of that time, he is found capable, he is appointed for a full term. If he is found incapable, he simply drops out of office, not by formal dismissal, but by the conclusion of the term of his provisional appointment.

Again, the President's reform makes great use of the test of experience in another way. Vacancies in offices coming under the rules are filled from subordinates in the same line of duty, if possible. If a subordinate can be found who has fitted himself for higher duties, and if the examination shows his fitness for promotion, he gets it against all outside applicants. In every case, whether of promotion in, or admission to the service, the examination is framed to test not only "knowledge and ability," but "special qualifications for the performance of the duties of the office."

It will thus be seen that, even in the cases where competitive examination is employed, it is by no means the sole test, but is strictly auxiliary and secondary to the test of experience. It may be said, generally, that the examination is the large sieve; experience is the finer one, which sifts the material selected by the former.

But there is a large class of cases not entirely excepted, in which competitive examination is not employed at all, but where the object of the rules is simply to take advantage of experience alone and fill vacancies by promotion, where any subordinate can be found competent. In some of these cases the choice of subordinates is left to the President on the recommendation of the head of the Department; in the remainder to the appointer—whether President or head of Department—on the recommendation of the Examining Board. The Philadelphia Postmastership was an instance of this kind. The following are the cases in which the head of Department must nominate subordinates for the President to choose from, if any subordinates are in his judgment qualified:

"Collector of Customs, Naval Officer, Appraiser or Surveyor of the Customs in the Customs Districts of New-York, Boston and Charlestown, Baltimore, San Francisco, New-Orleans, Philadelphia, Vermont, (Burlington,) Oswego, Niagara, Buffalo Creek, Champlain, Portland and Falmouth, Corpus Christi, Oswegatchie, Mobile, Brazos de Santiago, (Brownsville,) Texas, (Galveston, &c.,) Savannah, Charleston, Chicago, and Detroit; and Postmasters in cities having a population, according to the census of 1870, of twenty thousand or more."

Vacancies in the chief officers of customs not in the above districts, and in some of the minor post-offices, are to be filled from three subordinates, certified by the Examining Board. In all these cases, if subordinates are not found fit, or if the nominations are not confirmed by the Senate, the appointments are to be made at the discretion of the appointer.

The above is a concise statement of the actual requirements of the President's civil service reform rules as they are now in operation. No one who will make himself familiar with these rules can doubt that they have been adopted as a practical means of securing greater efficiency in the civil service, and not from whim, or from a doctrinaire desire to cure all ills by a single nostrum. It must be remembered that the President reserves the power to modify these rules at his discretion.

The Simmons Murder.

Monday's murder was, in some respects, the most remarkable of any of our recent daily homicides. Whether we consider the thoroughness with which DURYEA was chopped to pieces, or the coolness with which SIMMONS waited for the officers to carry him comfortably to the station-house, it is impossible not to recognize the artistic superiority of the Liberty-street murder over such an impulsive and roughly-executed crime as that for which FOSTER has been subjected to an inconvenient detention in the Tombs. Of course, the indictment of SIMMONS may be regarded as a certainty, but as to the particular plea upon which he will be subsequently set at liberty, there is much room for speculation.

In SIMMONS' demeanor after the commission of his crime, he showed his perfect confidence in the protection which the maudlin juryman and the merciful Judge will extend to him. As to the possibility of incurring the unpleasant attentions of the hangman, Mr. SIMMONS undoubtedly regards that contingency as being rather more remote than that of a prize in one of his well-known lotteries falling to a bona-fide ticket-holder. It is true that there will be no difficulty in proving that he stabbed DURYEA, but the accomplished criminal lawyer can easily prove that the act was altogether a justifiable and commendable one. There is the defense of emotional insanity, caused by the heartless conduct of DURYEA in supplanting SIMMONS in the affections of some fair and fickle woman. To be sure, no one has yet heard of any such feminine element in the affair, but it will be perfectly easy for SIMMONS' lawyer to paint a picture of man's duplicity and woman's weakness, which will draw tears and a verdict of immediate acquittal from the most slow-witted juryman. Or it can be proved that the stabbing was an act of self-defense. The fact that SIMMONS, who was vastly the superior of DURYEA in physical strength, was comfortably sitting upon him when he leisurely probed his person in various places with an inquisitive bowie-knife, need not conflict with this defense. The criminal lawyer who could not show that DURYEA, with premeditated and cunning malignity, contrived to place himself beneath SIMMONS, and held the latter firmly by placing his collar in SIMMONS' hand, while he selected an available spot in which to shoot him, does not deserve to practice at the New-York Bar. Even if, by accident, the line of defense chosen by the murderer's counsel should not prove successful, there are appeals, writs of error, and other ingenious proceedings by which the execution of his sentence could be postponed for a year or two, until Justice PRATT, the Murderer's Best Friend, should find a fitting opportunity to step in, and by one of those peculiar processes for the protection of murderers which he has so often used with invariable success, enable Mr. SIMMONS to once more resume the beneficent business of managing lotteries that never lose.

Four weeks ago there were twenty-two murderers in the Tombs. The list is much longer now, and is still steadily increasing. Not one in twenty of these men will meet with any punishment beyond a few months' detention in prison. Either jurymen will acquit them, or Judges will lend their aid to help them to escape by means of pettifogging trickery. The ruffian knows that he can kill with impunity. There is practically no law against murder in this City. The statute has been made a dead letter by idiots in the jury-box and reckless Judges on the Bench. How long do the respectable people of New-York propose to endure this state of things? How much longer will our Courts be permitted to make a mockery of justice, and to sacrifice the peaceful citizen in order to save the murderer from the gallows?

Chess Champions.

The late tragical death of FOURNIER DE SAINT AMANT brings back many interesting recollections. Once famous as the greatest chess-player in the world, and for years held to be the champion of France, M. ST. AMANT lived to be nearly seventy-three, and to die from being thrown from his carriage. Not much has been heard of him of late years; but, thirty years ago, the clubs, and, indeed, all society, both in Paris and London, rang with his fame. It was in 1843 that HOWARD STAUNTON ventured to dispute ST. AMANT'S title to be called the chess champion of Europe. The celebrated match then arranged—the greatest ever contested for the amount of the stakes, the wide interest excited, and the time consumed in the games—ended in the Frenchman's defeat. It was a gallant struggle, and the prevalent opinion of experts has been that Mr. STAUNTON, distinguished as were his merits, won by superior endurance rather than by superior skill. However, the match was fairly played according to the stipulated terms, and to the victor the honors fairly belonged. The excitement over this memorable encounter was intense. That created by the Heenan-Sayers battle was nothing to it. All classes in England and France watched the match with breathless attention. The games were commented upon, from day to day, by the leading journals of both countries, and the probable effect upon the result of each new development of tactics was weighed and disputed as if the fate of empires were the stake at issue.

It is a common superstition that people who play chess well can do nothing else well, and the negative side of the proposition has some tolerable evidence to support it. Several famous captains who excelled in the real field of war have failed in the mimic field of chess. NAPOLEON, who was passionately fond of the game, never could attain to any strength in it, and the same has been and is true of eminent soldiers in our own country. But it happens that both parties in the chess match spoken of have proved themselves the possessors of marked ability in other vocations. Chess is a game of singular fascination, and people having natural aptitude, who once fall in love with it, are very apt to devote themselves too exclusively to its pursuit. They are thus likely to be credited in time with ability for nothing else. On the other hand, the bad players who are good soldiers have commonly given too much time and thought to excel in war to leave space to excel in chess. On the whole, much the same qualities that bring success in the one walk, with equal vigor and industry bring success in the other. M. ST. AMANT himself disproved the popular notion by skill and remarkable achievements in several different and important departments. In his mission to Cayenne he showed high qualities as a diplomatist and statesman. His works on the French colonies are standard books of study and reference. At the head of part of the National Guard of Paris, he repeatedly—and notably in 1848—evinced courage, presence of mind, and military capacity. He made chess his pastime, rather than the sole and engrossing pursuit of his life; and, although from the renown he acquired by its practice his name was more frequently connected with chess than with anything else, it is certain that, in the absence of that particular talent, his claims to rank as a man of distinction would have been generally allowed.

A counterpart to this experience is suggested by the name of PHILIDOR, whose name would have come down to us as a famous musician had his powers at the chess-board been less conspicuous. Mr. STAUNTON, too, would be well known, or, we should rather say, better known, as an editor of SHAKESPEARE, and as the historian of the Great Schools of England, but for his overshadowing exploits at his favorite game. These examples, which are but a few among the many that might be given, are pretty good proofs that to be strong at chess does not imply weakness in other things. The penetration, sagacity, and self-control, and, what is more important still, the special faculty for judging, in critical situations, of the relative importance of things, must needs be as important elements for general success in life as for success in the checkered arena that saw the triumphs of a MORPHY or a SAINT AMANT.

Private Lamps.

Considering the heavy burdens which TWEED and his gang imposed on the tax-payers of this City, we have time and again urged that nothing should be left undone to reduce expenditures whenever an opportunity occurred. The Aldermen, however, do not appear to be of our way of thinking. On the 1st of July, of the present year, a resolution was passed by them purporting to direct the Commissioner of Public Works to disconnect from the main pipes all gas-lamps lighted for private purposes at the public expense. The matter was then allowed to drop until the 17th of October, when it came up in the following shape before the Assistant Aldermen:

"Assistant Alderman SIMONSON offered the following resolution:

That any and all resolutions heretofore adopted by the Common Council providing for the erection and maintenance of lamps in front of private property, at the expense of the City, be and they are hereby rescinded and repealed; and that the Commissioner of Public Works be and he is hereby directed to collect from such property-owners as require the retention of such lamps as aforesaid in front of their property the actual cost of the maintenance of such lamps, and that in all other cases the said Commissioner take the necessary steps to cause the immediate removal of such lamps.

Referred to the Committee on Lamps and Gas."

Beyond these spasmodic efforts at reform, there is no sign that anything has been accomplished toward putting an end to this shameful abuse. Last year, some seventy thousand and odd dollars were squandered for the lighting of private lamps. In front of Tammany Hall there are six of them, having three or more burners to each; a church at the corner of Fourteenth-street and Second-avenue has four; and so on, to the number of 1,348. We are quite sure that no congregation would be willing to pay for the lighting of four lamps, outside their church door, every night throughout the year. To cut off the gas under such circumstances would not, therefore, be likely to cause any dissatisfaction. The claims of clubs and halls are not worthy of the slightest consideration. The Commissioner of Public Works, in his report, just published, makes allusion to this subject; but from the present Boards of Aldermen it is not very likely that any relief will be afforded. Better things are expected from the incoming Boards.

The Washington Monument.

The Society which has in charge the completion of the Washington Monument at the national capital has recently been greatly encouraged by the receipt of one hundred and twenty-five dollars, from two patriotic Masonic lodges in California. With this sum, at least one additional stone can be laid upon that curious pile which challenges the wonder of the foreigner who visits Washington, and the Society may therefore fairly report progress in the work of completing the monument. Whether the admirers of WASHINGTON should rejoice or grieve over such a report, is a question which it is by no means easy to decide.

That the monument has been for twenty years in an exceedingly unfinished state, is due partly to the mistake made by the Society when it insisted upon presenting to all persons who subscribed a dollar to the work an engraving representing it as it was intended to appear upon its completion. The wretched recipient of this gift either broke out into bitter lamentation over his error in assisting to rear so monstrous a scarecrow, or, being a person of rare fatuity, complacently hung it upon his wall, and thus inspired his visitors with a deep-rooted opposition to the scheme. In either case, the result was the same. The public declined to devote its dollars to the monument, and the country suffered under the so-called disgrace of being unwilling to incur the cost of honoring the memory of WASHINGTON by expensive architectural absurdities.

It is certainly questionable whether the completion, or the refusal to complete, this monument would be the greater evil. As is generally known, the plan of the monument is a piecemeal imitation of an Egyptian monolithic obelisk, based upon a curiously-comic Grecian temple. Why the designer contented himself with this incongruous complication of architectural evils, does not appear. He ought to have provided for a series of Gothic flying buttresses, and crowned his obelisk with a Byzantine dome, bearing upon its apex a bronze statue, modeled by Mr. CLARKE MILLS, and exhibiting the Father of his Country in the act of neatly balancing himself upon his head. The plan would then have had a certain coherence of imbecility, which would have made it absolutely unequaled by anything the world has yet seen in the shape of humorous memorial architecture.

Undeniably bad as the design of this monument is, it is perhaps better than no monument whatever. There are those who hold that to rear a premeditated monument to WASHINGTON is unnecessary, and that, as Sir CHRISTOPHER WREN declined a private statue in St. Paul's, and preferred that the whole Cathedral should be regarded as his monument, so WASHINGTON doubtless would have preferred that the Republic which he made possible should be regarded as his only appropriate monument. The objection to this theory is obvious. The irreverent critic may mock at Sir CHRISTOPHER, by selecting the weakest points of St. Paul's Cathedral, and scornfully claiming them as lasting memorials of the architect's incompetency. In like manner, the hater of republics might select the modern juryman, and claim that he is the unpleasant monument of the folly of the immortal defender of free institutions. Moreover, such an excuse for not building a really noble monument, would be justly open to the suspicion of parsimonious motives. Since the vast majority of Americans are agreed that a Washington monument is desirable, it is probably best that the one upon which so much money has already been spent should be completed. When once the shaft shall have been finished, it will be an easy matter to tear away the comic temple which grovels at its base. We shall then have an obelisk, which, though it will be a patchwork pretense of a monolith, will, nevertheless, be imposing, because of its apparent simplicity and gigantic height. We may, therefore, congratulate the Society upon the $125 which has just enriched its treasury, and hope that in course of time the completed obelisk will replace the ruinous pile of mason work which for so many years has disfigured the capital.

MINOR TOPICS.

Free discussion is one thing, and the interruption of a lecturer is another. Nevertheless, there is a large class of ambitious persons who attend public lectures, and interrupt the speaker by putting to him questions which the proposers firmly believe will overwhelm their victim with confusion and dismay. The other evening Miss ANNA DICKINSON suppressed a person of this sort in a way which her audience greatly enjoyed. A budding orator, who announced that he was engaged in the jewelry business, rose up, and after explaining how much work he did in a day, propounded some utterly preposterous conundrums to the lecturer. Whereto the other, with disdainful brow, quietly remarked that she had not engaged to answer conundrums, but to deliver a lecture, and thereupon proceeded in her discussion, leaving the ambitious jeweler to be laughed at by an unsympathizing audience. He and his kind should remember that people who assemble to hear a lecture do not desire to have the crude ideas of ignorant persons violently intruded upon them, thereby interrupting that which they have paid their money to hear.

The recent loss of the Sacramento was apparently due partly to the inaccuracy of the charts of the locality where she was lost, and partly to the recklessness of the Captain. The charts were known to be inaccurate, and there was a dense fog at the time the vessel struck. The course which the ship was steering was supposed to be one which would carry her eight miles to the westward of the nearest land. Now, is it proper for the commander of a ship, who knows that his charts cannot be absolutely depended upon, to try to run within eight miles of the shore in a dense fog? Had he given the land a wider berth, thus making due allowance for any inaccuracy in his charts or compass, or for any current which might sweep him from his course, the Sacramento would not now be lying a total wreck on the San Antonio reef. Had the weather been clear, the accident would not have happened, but a cautious Captain does not risk shipwreck by shaving a dangerous coast in a heavy fog.

Harvard College, under the guidance of President ELLIOT, seems to have caught the spirit of the age, and changes in the discipline are about to be made which will undoubtedly increase the usefulness of this ancient and honored institution of learning. It has long been known in the universities of Europe that students become creditable in proportion as they are forced by moral influences to self-exertion, and the Faculty of Harvard have wisely determined to abolish compulsory attendance upon recitations, while they maintain the rigor of examinations unimpaired. The standing of each student under this arrangement will depend wholly upon himself, and this fact being constantly presented to him in the rule of his college, it is certain that he will not be so likely to waste his time as under the old method. Another contemplated reform is the abolition of morning prayers, and it is no small improvement on past ways that students, in the future, are not to have an opportunity to make a mockery of religious exercises. Old Harvard being thus progressive, it is to be hoped that whatever diminution of her revenues may have been caused by the Boston fire, will be speedily made up by public contributions.

A fresh evidence of the evil of being over litigious is furnished in the recent bankruptcy of one of the best-known paper manufacturers of the West, Mr. JOSIAH A. NOONAN, a prominent citizen of Milwaukee, Wis., for a quarter of a century. Mr. NOONAN has voluntarily gone into the bankrupt Court, as he says himself, "in order that the lawyers may take what they can get" in a fight with his creditors. He first became involved in legal difficulties through a dispute over leases of water-power for paper-mills; and, although he has disbursed upward of one hundred thousand dollars in satisfying bills of expenses, the claims on this account are still so great as to involve him in ruin. One of the chief hardships of the case consists in the fact that Mr. NOONAN has completed his sixtieth year, and may find it pretty difficult work beginning again. He has just published a very affecting letter by way of explaining his action, which has this passage in illustration of the old proverb—"When poverty comes in the door, love flies out the window:"

"And you will find it, (the coldness,) perhaps, more than anywhere else, in the very midst of those you have counted as your friends; with those to whom you have rendered unnumbered favors, to whom you are in nowise indebted, and whose extended hands, warm hearts, and sympathizing glances you would expect to be the first to greet you. On the other hand, you would be cheered by kind words and generous offers from sources from which you would have but faintly expected them, or surprised at meeting them at all."

The people of Chicago are at present supposed to be in a state of agitation over the prospect of a monopoly, which some persons think may have the effect of setting up a clique of men who will have it in their power to fix the price of every pound of meat sold in the markets of that city. It appears that there is a desire on the part of gentlemen, learned in sanitary science, to concentrate the slaughtering and rendering establishments in one district, so that the noxious gases which now escape and make a residence in certain localities exceedingly undesirable, may be controlled in such a way as to become perfectly harmless. The proprietor of one establishment is understood to have utilized these gases for illuminating purposes, providing himself with a light in many respects superior to the ordinary coal-gas. To get rid of the offal, a machine has been invented. It consists of a revolving boiler, with an eight-ton capacity, and a double shell, so constructed as to allow for the presence of perforated pipes, through which hot air passes. The boiler, in revolving, slowly stirs up the offal and brings it into contact with heated surfaces, making the entire contents as dry as dust in about forty minutes.

From the statistics of the loss of life upon the great lakes during the present season, it appears that 189 persons were drowned, and of this number 113 were lost with the vessels upon which they were engaged. The other seventy-six cases were those of sailors who fell overboard, and were washed off by heavy seas. This loss of life seems sufficiently large, but the total number of such casualties is sixty-one less than during the previous year. As we stated the other day, there were 863 disasters to vessels upon the lakes during the year, and this fact, taken in connection with the loss of life, shows that the navigation of the lakes is not less hazardous than that of the ocean. When the warnings of the Signal Service Bureau come to be more generally established and heeded at the lake ports, we may hope for a large reduction in this annual destruction of life and property.

The Salaries of Public Officers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read with much satisfaction some two or three very sensible editorials, recently published in the TIMES, on the subject of the small compensation allowed the various Federal officers—the President, United States Judges, and the heads of the different Departments at Washington—in which editorials you recommend a liberal increase of compensation for their services.

Your suggestion for an increase of compensation of the Federal officers enumerated in your editorials seems just and proper, and if adopted by Congress would give general satisfaction, and be approved by a large majority of the people of the United States.

It seems to the writer that your recommendation should have extended further, and have embraced other Federal officers not enumerated in the editorials above referred to, whose compensation seems inadequate, not only for their services rendered, but also for the great responsibility resting upon them.

I allude more particularly to some of the officers in the different departments in the New-York Custom-house, the Deputy Collector, Surveyor, Naval Officer, Appraisers, and United States Inspectors of Customs.

From the fact that nearly or quite two-thirds of the whole amount of revenue derived from Customs in the United States is collected at the port of New-York, some idea may be formed of the vast amount of business daily transacted at the New-York Custom-house, and of the responsibility involved in the collection of the revenue.

The compensation of the last class of officers above named is entirely inadequate to the amount of duty performed and the responsibility necessarily imposed upon them. Millions upon millions of dollars in valuable merchandise annually pass through their hands with little or no loss to the revenue, and yet for their daily services from sunrise to sunset they receive only the same amount of compensation that the longshoremen (many of whom can neither read nor write) receive for nine or ten hours' services, and $2 per day less than many mechanics receive for theirs, and that with little or no responsibility attached.

With the exercise of the strictest economy, the high price of house rents in the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, and of all the absolute necessaries of life, renders it very difficult for those officers who have families dependent upon them for support to get through the year without being in debt of the landlord, grocer, butcher, and tailor. This ought not so to be. Men of character and respectability, who are competent and well qualified to discharge the duties incident to their office, ought to receive compensation adequate to their responsibility and the amount of duty performed. JUSTICE.

The New-Hampshire Republicans.

The call for the New-Hampshire Republican State Convention, to be held in Concord Jan. 14, is addressed to "all who supported U. S. Grant and Henry Wilson at the late election; all who desire a firm, economical, and constitutional administration of national and State affairs; all who believe that 'honesty and efficience rather than political activity' should be the essential qualification for the public service, and all who accept the settlement of the prominent issues that have divided political parties for the last ten years as just and final."

OUR CURRENCY AND THE BANKS

Suggestions from an Experienced Banker

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I read with interest and approval so much as you published of Mr. Clews' pamphlet concerning the legal reserve of national banks, and my decided opinion is that, unless the Currency act is amended in that especial, and in some other particulars, the system will be unable to bear the strain of a very severe money pressure. My convictions are all the deeper from the uninterrupted prosperity of the banks ever since the passage of that act, and from the unconcern of banks as to the dangers to which they are exposed from the fettered and crippled condition forced upon them by the inexorable terms of the Currency act. The fewer the shackles, the stronger the banks. After securing their circulation and its redemption at par in your City, banks should be allowed the most perfect freedom in every other respect for conducting a fair and legitimate business. But how is it with all our interior banks of small capitals? After securing their circulation, they have nothing left. They have parted with their real means, which they could loan out with safety, for the privilege of issuing their own paper promises to pay on demand in some other paper promises to pay on demand; the latter being so much the better, as they are made legal tender in the payment of debts. Banking on such a basis may be safe and profitable, so long as an easy money market and the confidence of the public prevent the return of their notes for redemption.

But this is not all in regard to banks who invest their whole capital in Government bonds for notes of circulation; for though the circulation is secured by Government bonds at considerably below their par value, and which are worth a premium over their par value; though bill-holders are preferred creditors, and there is a double liability of stockholders, yet, in the face of all this accumulation of security, a bank is obliged to lay aside fifteen per cent. from the funds of its depositors, as a legal reserve to still further secure bill-holders. This legal reserve, required from banks in our principal cities, is even more severe; it is twenty-five per cent.; and the aggregate amount pledged in United States bonds to secure the circulation amounts to near $400,000,000, without including the premium which the bonds are worth above their par value. This sum, vast though it be, is conceded to be necessary for the protection of the public. But it must be borne in mind that not one dollar of these pledged bonds are available for the redemption of their circulating notes until after the failure of a bank. The legal reserve on circulation, therefore, cannot by any conceivable possibility be needed to protect bill-holders, and is therefore crippling and damaging to banks, by locking up uselessly means which should be used to aid the business and industries of the country, and controlled for the defense of the banks.

But the banks are also obliged to keep a like percentage reserve on their deposits, which, with the reserve on their circulation, and the United States bonds pledged to secure it and Government deposits, and the premium which the bonds are worth above par, amount to more than one hundred and forty millions over and above the entire capital of all the national banks. This is not all; for the banks must necessarily keep a considerable reserve on hand beyond what the law compels, in order to meet the demands of daily business. Thus the national banks, with an aggregate capital of four hundred and eighty millions, have actually locked up more than six hundred and twenty millions, not a dollar of which is available to meet the redemption of their circulation or the payment of their deposits, even though a temporary use of a portion of this reserve would avert impending dangers to the public, and save the banks themselves from bankruptcy.

This statement is itself a demonstration of the glaring defects of the present system of national banking. It is weakness diluted, and to such a degree that this very feature assumes the character of original design, that thus in time the banks might be swept away and specie payments reached through their destruction. This is not merely a fanciful conjecture.

Banks were less a necessity of the rebellion than was the issue of legal tenders; and we all know the noble champion of their issue, and how willing he was to strike them from existence with his own parental hand.

But there is a growing opposition in the public mind to this system, from its danger as a monopoly of the money power of the nation. This feeling it will be wise in the banks to appease, by concessions to the public good, receiving in return compensating advantages.

Thus the surrender of their circulation for entire relief from legal reserves would be of great reciprocal benefit. It is not safe for banks to do business entirely upon credit. If any business requires a cash capital to carry it on, it is banking. The lenders of money should have money to loan. The preceding statement shows that banks would be gainers, in carrying out the above suggestion, more than $140,000,000 of available means, besides being relieved from exposure to pay on demand $333,000,000 of circulating notes. I know that Mr. Boutwell opposes this measure. He says:

"In discussing the other changes caused by the war, the issue of United States notes, and of notes by the national banks, should be considered together. Indeed, they are necessary parts of our financial system, and neither can be substituted for the other without general disturbance to the State bank system, and to any system of private banks, while the substitution of an equal amount of United States notes as currency would be productive of serious evils and losses."

But I think he is mistaken, for why should the two currencies be considered only in their duplex character? Their respective merits constitute their combined worth—and if one is good and the other bad, then let us have the good unmixed. It is clear that legal-tenders afford the best currency from their superior attributes—just because they are legal tenders and bank notes are not so. The State Bank system would not be disturbed at all by the substitution of legal tenders for bank notes.

We have in this State sixty-eight incorporated banks, with an aggregate capital of about $25,000,000 and $84,000,000 of deposits. Probably not one of them would take circulation under the national system if they were allowed to do so; for some of them have withdrawn from that system, while some few of the National Banks forego the privilege of issuing notes of circulation. Again Mr. Boutwell assumes another untenable position. He says:

"The National Banks hold nearly four hundred million United States bonds, which otherwise would be thrown upon the market, absorbing domestic capital, or, if purchased abroad, adding to the amount of interest to the annual balances against us in our account current with other countries."

These bonds pledged for circulation would not be thrown upon the market at home or abroad. The banks could not, if they would, and would not if they could, pay into the Treasury in money the amount of their circulation, and take up their bonds. This is too near an impossibility to be thought of. The Government would take just enough of the bonds at their market value to cover the circulation, and return the excess of bonds to the banks. Thus the Government would cancel so much of its debt, and assume the redemption of the bank circulation. Nor would the banks be likely to throw the fifty million of returned bonds suddenly upon the market, for they serve to exempt banks from a tax on so much of their capitals, and, as an available resource, would be likely to be retained for some pressing emergency. The banks save the tax upon their circulation, and would lose a tax on a corresponding amount of their capitals.

Thus the currency would be improved in quality, but the same in amount. The Government, by having the entire circulation, would be unopposed by the conflicting interests of banks in its measures for resuming specie payments. It will pay off and cancel $333,000,000 of its debt, if it takes that amount of bonds, and thus lessen by $18,000,000 yearly the burdens of taxation. I have stated the circulation of banks as above. I suppose it really amounts to over $342,000,000.

To give full significance to this proposed measure, let it be received in all the importance and magnitude of its import and bearings.

Three hundred and thirty-three millions at six per cent. half-yearly compound interest for thirty-three years, would in that period pay off the whole interest-bearing debt of the United States.

Under such a measure of finance, who can estimate the jubilation of tax-payers, or the extent to which it would invigorate our industries and exalt the credit of the nation?

An Interesting Question of Practice in the Marine Court—Petition for a Writ of Prohibition.

An unusual question in regard to the law and the practice in the Marine Court was yesterday presented to the Supreme Court, Judge Leonard presiding, on the application of Martin L. Townsend, who appeared for the petitioner, Ferguson, and asked for an order to show cause why a writ of prohibition should not issue, commanding the Justices of the Marine Court to desist and refrain from any further proceedings in the action wherein the petitioner was plaintiff and John M. Jones was defendant. It appeared, on the application for the writ, that an action was brought by Ferguson, in the Marine Court, against Jones. Issue was joined and a trial had before one of the Justices of that Court without a jury. The Justice ordered judgment for the defendant, which was duly entered. The plaintiff then appealed from the judgment to the General Term, and a case was made and settled. Pending that appeal, the Justice before whom the case was tried entertained a motion upon his minutes to set aside the judgment and order a new trial, and, after argument, granted the motion vacating the judgment and ordering a new trial. The petitioner claimed that neither the law nor the practice authorized a Judge, before whom a case was tried without a jury, after judgment and pending an appeal, to entertain any such motion, a new trial in which Judge Leonard concurred, and the order asked for was granted. W. Cary Smith appeared for defendant Jones.

The Mission at Kit Burns' Rat-Pit—Fair in Aid of the Woman's Home.

A bazaar was opened at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory yesterday for the benefit of the Home for Women, a mission that was opened three years ago in the once notorious rat-pit of Kit Burns, at No. 273 Water-street, under the superintendency of Rev. W. H. Boole. The fighting pit, once the resort of the vilest criminals, is now a chapel in charge of "Fred" Bell, formerly a "runner" and a prize-fighter, but now an earnest worker, whose labors among the vicious of Water-street are said to be productive of much good at this institution. A home is provided for abandoned women who desire to reform, and many philanthropic men and women gratuitously give their time to the good work of reformation, which is said to have been so successful that the building they now occupy is too small, and to raise money for a larger one the bazaar has been established through the efforts of Miss Julia A. Barker and others. Last evening the room presented a very pleasant appearance, notwithstanding the fact that many contributions have not yet arrived. The attendance was satisfactory. One of the tables is devoted to articles from California, mostly curious Chinese work. The Fair will only remain open until the 26th.

The Northern Pacific Railroad.

Gen. Geo. W. Cass, in recently accepting the Presidency of the Northern Pacific Railroad, made the following remarks before the Board of Directors:

GENTLEMEN: It is now about three months since you expressed your confidence in my devotion to the best interests of this corporation, and of my ability to serve it, by electing me to the most responsible position within your gift, that of the Presidency, which was soon to become vacant. For this evidence of your appreciation I feel most grateful; but the position I cannot accept with an unmixed feeling of gratitude. I accept it with doubt and hesitation, in view of its great responsibilities.

When the Board made its selection of a successor to the gentleman who created this great enterprise as it stands before the public today, I was by your appointment on a Committee to go to the Pacific coast, and afterward to Minnesota and Dakota, to make a personal examination of the road, its route, and its land grant, and to look into anything which concerned the Company's present and future. Before accepting or declining the trust you offered to me, I thought it to be fit—to be due to myself, to you, and to that small portion of the public that might place confidence in the enterprise by reason of my presiding over it—that I should first make this personal examination, and therefore found my judgment of the ultimate value of the Northern Pacific Railroad and of its land grant.

That examination has been made, and my opinion of the property has been formed on the examination. And I come today to announce my acceptance of the honor and the office you have tendered to me, and to promise to devote to this enterprise all of my time, and whatever of experience and judgment I have acquired in forty years of active business life, most of it spent in works of a character similar to the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

In making a personal examination of the Road, the route, and the land grant to which I have referred, I was one of a Committee of a majority of your Board, and thus had the full advantage of observation from the various stand-points at which different minds and temperaments would naturally view so great a project, all aiding me to reach a more secure and sounder judgment.

In the journey we examined about one thousand miles of the route of your Road and of the lands contiguous. Of the line and the lands, more than one-half was on the Pacific coast. Of the constructed portion of the Road, we twice passed over four hundred miles, examining the whole of the property and the whole of the thousand miles of route by daylight, purposing to rely on what we saw, and not on what we heard, as to the route, the land, the property, and the probable future development of the enterprise.

It is not my purpose to go into an elaborate recital of the facts and of the theories on which I base my opinion that the Northern Pacific Railroad can be constructed at a reasonable cost; that it can be operated and maintained at a less cost than any other railroad across the continent north of the parallel thirty-three, for very obvious reasons; and it will have, when constructed, and at once, a larger local traffic than any other road can have west of the one hundredth meridian of longitude; but I will say to you that such is my well-considered judgment.

I will also say that the vast country within the limits of your land is not equaled by any similar extent of country west of the Mississippi River, in all of the elements necessary to support an intelligent, enterprising, and prosperous population in the comforts and luxuries of life.

There is no problem to solve as to the success of the Northern Pacific Railroad after it shall have been constructed. The only question after that event will be how intelligent men of this age should ever have had a doubt about its success.

With these views, gentlemen, I enter upon the duties of the trust you have committed to me.

The Snow-Storm Yesterday.

Yesterday morning opened with a heavy fall of snow, which lasted until the afternoon, when a drizzling rain succeeded it. The streets on which two or three inches of snow had been were rapidly converted into a vast mud-puddle, and business out of doors was, as a natural consequence, almost entirely suspended. The street-cars did a thriving business, and scarcely any pedestrians could be seen on the side-streets, and but a few ladies were seen on Broadway. Mr. Henry Bergh, President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was on hand early, and finding several lines of street-railroads unprovided with extra teams, obliged them to stop their cars until the teams were doubled up. The mail service was uninterrupted, and the vans carrying the mail to the City arrived on time.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NOTES.

The third soirée of chamber-music given by Mr. Mills and Dr. Damrosch may be attended at Steinway Hall this evening. The instrumental pieces selected for recital are a suite by Goldmark, a trio by Beethoven, and a sonata, for piano and violin, by Schumann. Miss Jenny Busk will be the vocalist.... A concert, the programme of which consisted wholly of works by Herr Jean Vogt, a musician well known in Germany, took place at Steinway Hall, on Tuesday afternoon. Herr Vogt himself presided at the piano, to the detriment, we must say, of the effect of his compositions, which he recited altogether too noisily. A quintet for stringed instruments, capitally played by Dr. Damrosch, and Messrs. Matzka, Schwartz, Goffrié, and Bergner, was the most interesting incident of the performance.

Miscellaneous.

PROF. TYNDALL'S LECTURES.

The second of the series of lectures by Prof. Tyndall may be attended at Cooper Institute this evening. The high order of these entertainments, interesting as well as instructive, commends them to the public with exceptional force.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

In the TIMES of the 8th inst. it was reported that Mr. Mortimer Wright, one of the company attached to the Academy of Music, Buffalo, had died of lockjaw, caused by wounds inflicted by Mr. J. B. Studley, during the bowie-knife fight in the drama of "Buffalo Bill." This report is unjust to Mr. Studley, as Mr. Wright died of black small-pox, and not from lockjaw, as erroneously stated in that report. The Health Physician of Buffalo certifies to this fact, which exonerates Mr. Studley from all blame in connection with Mr. Wright's death.

The Lesson of the Mutual Life Discussion.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read the whole debate from proposition to conclusion, and the sum of the whole matter seems to be this:

That a majority of the Mutual Companies cannot afford to reduce their rates of insurance, while the one having the largest and longest experience believes that it can do so with safety and propriety. Indeed, the resolution of its Board, disposing of the matter for the present, declares: That while the past experience of the Company demonstrates its ability to carry out the plan of reduced premiums, "it directs, in compliance with the request of the other companies referred to, that the proposed reduction of rates be not carried into effect until the further action of the Board."

There is, then, delay only, not a total change of purpose. The Mutual Life may yet, and not long hence, we trust, will reduce their rates and furnish insurance at its worth.

Dividends are well enough in theory, but in practice their ever-changing character, and the misrepresentations and disappointments incidental to and springing out of them, or the failure of them, make the matter of dividends the disgrace of many, and the bane of most Mutual Companies.

The proposition of the Mutual Life of New-York was really a blow at the dividend delusion. It was an approximation to pure and simple and legitimate life insurance to the low rates of stock companies. It was a step in the right direction. It was a substantial indorsement of the premiums of such companies. The rates it intended to adopt for itself were only say half a dozen per cent. in excess of stock rates, and these stock rates, backed by the enormous capital of such companies as the NATIONAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of the United States of America, has been previously unqualifiedly indorsed by Mr. Elizur Wright and Mr. Sheppard Homans, as sound and sufficient; and here I quote as appropriate from the report of the gentlemen and Mr. D. P. Fackler to the various Mutual Companies which requested the Mutual Life to reconsider its purposes:

"Mutual rates are designedly, and certainly ought to be, higher than the probable cost—the excess forms the capital."

And again: The reserves of the old policies are, in effect, to be used as a capital stock, to bear the expenses of getting new business at stock rates, which must considerably exceed the margins of the new premiums. The public will be glad to welcome the day of universally cheap insurance. The stock companies of the country are the only ones which can now give insurance at its cost. The National Life Insurance Company of the United States of America, chartered by Congress, (not the National of New-York, one of the Mutual companies objecting to the proposed reduction,) has a capital of $1,000,000, owned by such men as Jay Cooke, E. A. Rollins, John Sherman, Clarence H. Clark, and Wm. G. Moorehead.

The largest capital which has ever been pledged in any pure life company in America, to protect rates approved by the best actuarial talent of the country, of this Company, its rates, plans, &c., the special lesson of the last two weeks' discussion is highly commendatory.

Presentation of a Flag to the Seventy-Ninth Regiment.

The veterans of the old Seventh-ninth Regiment, New-York State Volunteers, last evening turned over the flag presented to them by the City of New-York during the war to the care of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, National Guard. The flag was presented by Brevet-Gen. David Morrison, who commanded the regiment during the war, and the presentation speech was made by Brevet-Capt. John A. Thompson, who lost his leg at Chantilly while carrying the colors. Capt. Laing received the flag, and responded on behalf of the Seventy-ninth Regiment, National Guard.

Holiday Gifts of Use and Elegance.

One of the most desirable and useful of all holiday gifts is a fine mantel clock, and to procure this in its greatest beauty and excellence, go to the new ware-rooms of the American Clock Company, No. 581 Broadway, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel. The high standard arrived at in this country in constructing implements for measuring time has in no direction been more decided than in the line of fine mantel clocks, as made by Messrs. Seth Thomas' Sons & Co. They are not only unrivaled as time-keepers, but are in conception, design, and construction highly creditable productions in the fine and industrial arts; making them fully equal in finish and beauty to the best French mantel clocks, but much their superior in recording time, and sold at lower prices. THE ABSOLUTE TEST OF EXCELLENCE.—The truest test of excellence in a sewing-machine is, after all, the record of its sales. The manufacture of the WILSON IMPROVED UNDER-FEED MACHINE employs an immense manufactory and nearly 500 skilled workmen. The machines are turned out at the rate of from 1,800 to 2,000 per week, and are sold faster than they can be made. The factory is pushed from day to day with orders. There is nothing strange in all this when we consider that it is a first-class, perfect machine, capable of any class of work, good for twenty years' constant service, and costing $15 less than the other first-class machines. MISCELLANEOUS.

COUGHS AND COLDS.

Every case of Consumption commences with cough, excited from the individual having taken cold.

The diseases of the air-passages are of great interest to every intelligent being. The delicate organization of the lungs, their constant activity, and their being exposed to contact of air of such different temperature, and which contains various irritating matters suspended in it, render them especially liable to diseases, and those of a most serious character.

Let me direct your attention to the symptoms, and different parts which are diseased, when a person has a common cold:

The mouth, nose, throat, organs of voice, and lungs are lined by a continuous mucous membrane, which, in a state of health, is constantly moist. The secretion of this moisture, to a certain amount, constitutes a necessary part of its healthy function; but when an individual gets a cold, a part of all this membrane becomes inflamed, the first effect of which is to alter its secretion.

It is at first dry—the secretion is suspended—it becomes swollen and thicker than before, it is redder than natural, and its sensibility is perceptibly altered. We can see a portion of this membrane, and by noticing the changes produced in it by inflammation, we infer those changes which are apt to take place in the parts we cannot see. Everybody has experienced in their own person an inflammation of that part of the membrane lining the nose, constituting a cold in the head. At first the nostril is dry, and though it is dry we cannot breathe through it—it is stuffed up by the membrane being swelled—the sense of smell is altered or lost; the part is red, tender and irritable; the contact of a little colder or less pure than common excites sneezing.

Sometimes, when the disease is severe, there is a slight chilliness, and toward evening a little fever. After the dryness of the membrane a thin, watery fluid, which by degrees becomes thicker; the swelling of the membrane diminishes, and as the inflammation subsides it is less raw, the secretion resumes its natural quality, and is reduced in quantity, and the membrane is in its natural state. Such is the general course of a cold in the head.

When the inflammation goes down into the lungs it is said to be a cold in the chest. It sometimes travels from one part of the membrane to another, beginning in the nose, and gradually creeping down into the windpipe and lungs. When a person has such a cold there is a dry cough, more or less difficulty of breathing, sometimes a degree of pain or oppression across the chest, slight fever and thirst, and a thin white coat upon the tongue, which is not always the case.

Frequently a bottle of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup and a box of Schenck's Mandrake Pills, freely taken, will carry off a cold of this kind in every case in which a person has taken what is called a fresh cold, they should take a dose of Schenck's Mandrake Pills, or something that will act upon the liver (not calomel) and physic the stomach; then, with the aid of the Pulmonic Syrup, it is carried off, not like the ordinary remedies that are used for a cold, or to check a cough, which is left in the system, to break out again worse than before, at the slightest change of the weather. If this course was followed, even to take a good dose of Schenck's Mandrake Pills, (without the Pulmonic Syrup,) and physic the bowels well, hundreds, yes thousands, would escape Consumption. When the liver and stomach perform their duty, it is difficult to take cold, or catch any other disease. Typhoid, bilious, or chills and fever cannot be taken when the system is in its proper condition. How often persons go out in cold, rainy weather, wet feet, perhaps, and expect to take a severe cold, and yet receive no inconvenience from it; while at other times, with the slightest exposure, they take a severe cold! The reason is, the liver is inactive, the gall-bladder is locked up, the blood has not its natural circulation, and the system is in a condition to catch anything. An ulcerated throat, canker, or catarrh is caused by acidity of the stomach; a coated tongue, bad breath, and sick headache are from the same cause, and they are all easily removed by using Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, according to the directions which accompany each.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The following is a review of the business transacted at the Exchange, yesterday, Wednesday, Dec. 18, which, although considerable in amount, independent of the parties interested, was of no particular importance to the general public, for all the sales consummated were of a legal character, and the purchasers in each instance were the plaintiffs in the foreclosure suits. James M. Miller, under a Supreme Court order, R. C. Beamish, Esq., referee, sold a four-story brown-stone front French flat house and lot, latter 20 by 80, on the west side of Lexington-avenue, forty-nine feet north of Fifteenth-street, for $20,000 over and above incumbrances, amounting to $23,500; total price, $43,700. Also, under the direction of the same referee, one lot, with building thereon about half finished, situate on the south side of East Thirty-sixth street, 25.5 feet east of Madison-avenue, lot 25.8 by 102.2, for $500, over and above mortgage and interest, amounting to $10,525; total price $11,025. The first-named property was bought by Christian Klein, and the second by Thomas stevenson. The same auctioneer also, under a Supreme Court order, Dennis M. Carpenter, Esq., referee, disposed of a lot, 20 by 80, with an unfinished three-story and basement Nova Scotia stone-front house thereon, located on the east side of Madison-avenue, 19.11 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-second-street, for, including incumbrance of $8,600, $9,100. The purchaser was S. T. Cannon, plaintiff. In addition to the above, Joseph McGuire, under a Supreme Court foreclosure decree, Charles Boeller, Esq., referee, sold two three-story and basement New-Brunswick-stone front houses and lots, four each 20 by 80, situate on the west side of Madison-avenue, 79.11 feet north of One Hundred and Thirty-second-street, one for $13,300 and the other for $14,300, both purchased by David Masters, plaintiff in the legal action. No further sales were made, the sale announced by A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co., under a Court order, of a gore lot on the south side of East Eighty-eighth-street, 22.6 feet west of Third-avenue, being postponed indefinitely.

For today several auctions are noticed, one or two of which are of importance, particularly that in charge of Messrs. Muller & Co. The real estate to be offered is as follows: By Muller, Wilkins & Co., at public auction, a valuable plot of ground, in size 47.9 by 100, (rear line 60 feet,) located on the south west corner of First-avenue and Thirty-sixth-street. By E. H. Ludlow & Co., at public auction, the desirable plot of ground, with three-story and cellar frame building, 26 by 40, in front thereof, and three-story and cellar brick building, 22 by 25, in rear, known as No. 17 Broome-street, south-east corner of Mangin-street, lot 26 by 75. By Joseph McGuire, at an adjourned Supreme Court sale, eight lots, together forming a plot in size 200 by 99 11, situate on the north side of Fifty-seventh-street, 200 feet east of Tenth-avenue, and by Jere. Johnson, Jr., at an executor's sale, a house and lot on the east side of Norfolk-street, 125.3 feet south of Grand-street, lot 25 by 100.

At private contract, Wm. H. Raynor, No. 5½ Pine-street, reports having recently sold one lot, 24.11 by 105, feet, on the east side of the Grand Boulevard, 434.9 feet south of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth-street, and one lot, 20 by 80 and 91 feet, 20 feet south of the above, for $21,000, or $7,000 per lot. We also learn that Hall J. Howe, No. 12 Pine-street, has recently sold the lot disposed of at the Exchange at auction some two weeks since by V. K. Stevenson & Son, situate on the south-east corner of Fifth-avenue and Ninetieth-street, (25 by 100 feet,) for $50,000, to Hon. Thomas J. Creamer. The price is the same realized at the auction. The lot is one of the best of the avenue, considered as it is on high ground, and for building purposes particularly desirable.

We are informed through several communications recently received, that quite an extensive line of swindling is being carried on in the matter of renting houses, the modus operandi being as follows: A man representing himself through his card to be a real estate broker, calls upon the owner of a house on which he has seen the usual bill for sale, states that he has a "customer" for that particular house at the full price asked by the owner, and by other false representations obtains permission to show it to his "patron," who, in fact, is a confederate. This confederate calls at once upon the owner, and without hesitation agrees to the price; but, proving to be a man of straw, and unable to pay anything to bind the contract, the sale falls through. The pretended broker then presents to the owner a bill for commissions, amounting generally to one per cent. on the valuation of the property, which the owner, under the belief that he has sold, immediately pays. The whole thing is a systematic fraud, and one deserving the severest punishment. Owners of property, especially at this season of the year, when new contracts are to be made, cannot be too careful into whose hands they entrust their interests, and in selecting a broker to transact their business, should rely only upon those of established integrity and reputation.

HORACE GREELEY'S WILLS.

Further Interesting Proceedings Before the Surrogate's Court.

Miss Ida Greeley Divides the Property with Her Sister—Mr. Greeley's Last Moments Described.

At the opening of the Surrogate's Court of Westchester County yesterday morning, the proceedings in the matter of proving the last will and testament of the late Mr. Greeley, as written and signed by himself on the 9th day of November last, and executed on the evening of the 29th ult., a short time before his death, were resumed, in behalf of the proponents, by calling to the stand Mr. Reginald Hart, No. 33 Park-row, New-York, who testified as follows:

I reside at Mount Kisco, Westchester County; I was acquainted with Horace Greeley during his lifetime; am familiar with his handwriting; the paper shown me (being will dated Nov. 9, 1872,) is in Horace Greeley's handwriting, including the signature; I am one of the subscribing witnesses to that instrument; it was executed on the 29th day of November last, at the house of Dr. Choate; Miss Lampson was the other subscribing witness; it was signed by myself and Miss Lampson in the presence of each other; it was between five and six o'clock in the afternoon when I first saw the will there; I reached the house of Dr. Choate about five o'clock on that day; I was let into the house by Dr. Choate's attendant; the next person I saw was Mr. Stuart; there were several other persons at the house whom I do not now recollect; I saw Miss Ida Greeley, and I told her I wished to see if Mr. Greeley was in a fit condition to execute the will; I went into the room with Mr. Stuart and Miss Ida Greeley; Mr. Stuart asked Mr. Greeley if he knew me; Mr. Greeley opened his eyes and said yes; Mr. Stuart was sitting by the bedside at the time; Mr. Stuart then held the will up before Mr. Greeley, and asked him if he acknowledged that to be his last will and testament; at first he said no; I then said, "It is the will you wrote, Mr. Greeley;" he then said yes; Mr. Stuart asked Mr. Greeley if Mr. Hart should witness the will, and he said yes; he next asked if Mr. Haines should witness the will, and he said no; he then asked Mr. Greeley if he (John R. Stuart) should witness the will, and he said no; Mr. Stuart then asked him if he would have Aunty Lampson for a witness, and he said yes; Aunty Lampson and myself took the will to a table or bureau, and we both signed it there in each other's presence; I think the bureau stood from eight to ten feet from the bed.

Q.—From what you saw and heard on that occasion, did Mr. Greeley seem to understand what he was doing? A.—As clearly as possible to my mind.

Cross-examined by Mr. Williams—While I was in the room with Mr. Greeley, Mr. Reid came in; he walked up to the bed; Mr. Stuart asked Mr. Greeley if he knew Mr. Reid, and he said yes, and put his hand out and shook hands with Mr. Reid quite warmly, so warmly as to attract my attention; Mr. Reid said, "I would have come sooner if I thought I could have done any good;" Mr. Greeley looked pleased; Mr. Reid asked him if he was in pain, and Mr. Greeley replied yes; I remained in the room about fifteen minutes after the will was executed; Mr. Haines remained in the room all the time with me; I think Mr. Reid remained there after I left the room; I think some one asked me what I thought Mr. Greeley's condition was, and I replied that, so far as I could see, he was as bright as I was; I think Dr. Choate asked me whether the will had been executed, and I told him that it had; I think I knew the fact that Dr. Choate made the treatment of insanity a specialty.

The following is a release from the brother and sisters of Mr. Greeley to Misses Ida L. and Gabrielle, of which the following embraces the essential points, was offered by the proponents and placed on file, to wit:

We particularly hereby release or discharge any claim or right which we, or either of us, may have under any will at any time made by the said Horace Greeley, and stipulate and agree not to contest the will of said Horace Greeley made on the 29th day of November, 1872, and we hereby consent that the same may be proved by the Surrogate of Westchester County, N. Y., and we renounce all right or interest under any will of said Horace Greeley.

NATHAN B. GREELEY,
ARMINDA GREELEY,
ESTHER GREELEY CLEVELAND,
MARY B. GREELEY.

The proponents here proposed to rest their case for the present, whereupon Mr. Williams, counsel for contestants, rose and contended that the testimony adduced was not such as to call upon the contestants to oppose it; that on his judgment the will was not entitled to probate.

Surrogate Coffin remarked that the proponents had probably made out a prima-facie case.

Judge Hart said that they had other witnesses to produce at the proper time.

Mr. Williams contended that the proponents were bound to produce all their testimony at once; that they must exhaust their evidence, and referred to the Parrish will case in support of that view.

The Surrogate said no—that the proponents have proved a prima-facie case, and there rest; that the contestants assail that position, and I must allow them to call witnesses to maintain their position.

Wm. E. Robinson was then called and examined for the contestants. He deposed as follows:

I am a counselor-at-law, and have been such for fifteen or twenty years; I knew Mr. Greeley for thirty-four years; I drew up a will; it was executed by himself.

Mr. Robinson here produced a will dated Sept. 21, 1871, but its reading was objected to by Mr. Nelson. Mr. Williams stated that his object in producing it was to show that the last will was not in harmony with Mr. Greeley's well-known expressed views.

It was ordered on file without being read. It had been in possession of witness ever since its execution.

George P. Nelson, counsel of Miss Gabrielle Miriam Greeley, examined by Mr. Williams.

Q.—Have you in your possession a paper purporting to be a deed from Miss Ida Greeley to her sister Gabrielle? A.—I have.

Mr. WILLIAMS—Will you produce it? A.—Not unless I am so directed by the Surrogate.

At the suggestion of the Surrogate the deed was produced and declared to be considered as evidence in the case.

The following is a copy of the deed in question:

DEED FROM IDA L. TO GABRIELLE M. GREELEY.

Whereas, Horace Greeley, late of the town of New-Castle, County of Westchester, State of New-York, by his last will and testament, dated the 9th day of November, 1872, gave and bequeathed all the property of which he died possessed, including lands, mortgages, bonds, notes of land, debts, stocks, dues, and obligations, to the elder daughter, Ida L. Greeley, one-half to be by her used at her own discretion in the education and support of her sister Gabrielle, the other moiety to be her own in every right.

And whereas, the said Ida L. wishes to avoid all questions respecting the true intent, meaning, and effect of said will, and also wishes to show a proper regard to her father's will, as above expressed, and to perform her duty toward her sister Gabrielle in respect to said education: Now I, the said Ida L. Greeley, of the town of New-Castle aforesaid, in consideration, not only of love and affection, but of one dollar to me in hand paid by Gabrielle M. Greeley, of the same place, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have bargained, sold, and quit-claimed, and by these presents do bargain, sell, and quit-claim unto the said Gabrielle, her heirs and assigns forever, all the one undivided half of all the property, real and personal, that is given and bequeathed by said last will and testament, so that the said Gabrielle and I, Ida, shall be equal beneficiaries under said will, with this reservation and exception, that until the said Gabrielle arrives at the age of twenty-one years, said Ida shall use her discretion in the education and support of said Gabrielle as is contemplated by said will, and shall appropriate so much of the property hereby transferred to said Gabrielle as may be necessary or proper therefor: and with this further reservation and exception that should the said Ida deem it advantageous to sell and dispose any of the real estate hereby transferred to said Gabrielle, before said Gabrielle arrives at the age of twenty-one years, she may, with the written consent of said Gabrielle, though she be an infant, do so, and give good conveyance therefor, and add the proceeds thereof to the personal property hereby transferred to said Gabrielle.

And the said Ida covenants, promises, and agrees to, and with the said Gabrielle, that she, the said Ida, hath not done, committed, or suffered any act or thing whereby the above property, or any part thereof now is, or hereafter may be, impeached, charged, or encumbered. And the said Ida also covenants, promises, and agrees to, and with said Gabrielle, at any time within one year after said Gabrielle arrives at the age of twenty-one years, upon the reasonable request, and at the proper cost and charges of said Gabrielle, that she, the said Ida, will make, do, and execute, or cause to be made, done, and executed, every such further and other lawful and reasonable act, conveyance, and assurance in the law for the better and more effectual vesting and confirming the property hereby sold and transferred, or intended to be, in and to the said Gabrielle, her heirs and assigns forever, as by the said Gabrielle, her heirs, and assigns, or her, or their counsel learned in the law, shall be reasonably advised or required.

In witness whereof, the said Ida has hereunto set her hand and seal, this 12th day of December, 1872.

IDA L. GREELEY.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of Reginal Hart.

Nathan Barnes Greeley, a brother of the late Horace Greeley, after testifying in relation to the manner in which the farm occupied by him became the joint property of himself and his late brother, expressed his readiness to give up his claim to the property for the benefit of his nieces. He also stated that he had received thousands of dollars from his brother without any consideration therefor. He further testified to the sanity which Horace Greeley had extended to his sisters, Arminda Greeley and Mary Boak Greeley.

Thomas A. Rooker, examined: I have resided in Brooklyn since 1840; I entered the Tribune office on its first issue as a compositor and subsequent foreman of the composing-room, which position I occupy at the present time; I have been in almost daily intercourse with Mr. Greeley; he has visited my house and stopped there when he has been ill or wearied; I was the first person approached to found the Printers' Association, and was exceedingly intimate with Mr. Greeley; a short time ago I protested to Mr. Greeley against his selling any more stock in the Association; he informed me that he was selling a share to pay off a debt, but that it was the last time he would put his hand to paper in the way of indorsing the obligations of others; I was at the funeral of Horace Greeley, and observed that Mr. Greeley did not appear to be the man I had known so long; he looked as though he did not know where he was, and as though he was crazy; the next after that I saw him on the 11th of November, in his room at the Tribune office; I went upstairs to his room to greet him; he seemed to be asleep in his chair; Mr. Cleveland was there, and I remarked to Mr. Cleveland that as Mr. Greeley appeared to be asleep, I would not disturb him, and started to leave, but as I was going downstairs, Mr. Greeley said, "Rooker, I want to see you;" I returned, when he shook hands with me, and after some apparent inclination to fall asleep again, he said, "I am ruined; we are all ruined; we are all broken up; you have got some property; I have none; I therefore want you to take care of my children for me." I promised him that I would do so; I then said to him, "I wish you would go home with me; if you will go home with me and stop there where no one can see you you will soon feel better," but he declared that he could not do so; he declared that he could not write what he desired; he had been trying to write something about the Boston fire and Wall-street operations; Mr. Reid came in and I told him about Mr. Greeley being unable to write, and he remarked that it had been attended to; while I was urging Mr. Greeley to go with me to my house a friend called, and occupied his mind for a while; I wanted him to go with me, and have a talk about old times in order to cheer up his spirits, but he would not give me any answer; finally I induced him to consent, and I took him over with me in a carriage; after I had taken him to his room he came down-stairs, and laid down on the sofa and slept a short time; he then called out, and I went to him, but instead of talking he dropped off again into a kind of stupor; I tried to get him engaged in conversation to cheer him up; he found a poem and read it, and then asked me whether I had read one entitled "The Earth," he said it was the most awful book he had ever read, but did not say in what respect; he appeared to be perfectly familiar with its contents; about half past nine P. M. he appeared tired and sleepy, and retired; when I got up early next morning, I found Mr. Greeley up reading the Tribune; he remained with us for breakfast; he manifested a desire to get over to the City; I proposed procuring a carriage for him, but he said "No, I will take the cars;" after crossing the ferry we took a Bleecker-street car and rode to the office; when I saw him at the office Nov. 11 I thought his mind was unsound; I made up my mind as to what was the matter with him; when he crossed the ferry a great many people passed at him; he looked vacant, as though he did not know where he was; I did not see him again until Wednesday evening following; I then saw him at Mr. Sinclair's house; there was to be a meeting of stockholders at Mr. Sinclair's about Mr. Greeley's affairs; many of the stockholders appeared greatly alarmed in regard to him; he jumped up from the sofa where he had been lying; I think he was more dispondent then than I had ever seen him; he made exclamations to the effect that he had ruined himself and his friends; that he had committed acts that were disreputable; that day he said that he was ruined; that he had been black-balled, and would be sent to State Prison; he left no doubt on my mind that he was insane; Mr. Greeley was rational at times; the great point of his delusions was that, that he was ruined; that he had ruined the Tribune Association and his own personal estate, and everybody; the aspect of his countenance was sad; he had a very vacant look; his face appeared sharp and haggard; he told me that he had lost flesh to the extent of twenty pounds.

Cross-examined by Mr. Nelson.—Mr. Greeley would stand and gaze about him in a stupid manner, as though he was lost; he was ill after the first battle of Bull Run.

Q.—Had not Mr. Greeley often a strange, abstracted look? A.—He would look strange when people called him a liar; he would write and talk back so that any stranger would be apt to think he was strange and peculiar; on the 11th of November last he showed the first symptom of what I thought strange and irrational; it was in his own room at the Tribune office, about two o'clock; I was in his room again in about half an hour; he then said he was ruined; he also said to me "You have property, I have not; I want you to take care of my children;" I told him that I would do so if it took all the money I had; to which he made no response; I witnessed that something was gone; he said he was completely ruined, and wanted me to pledge myself that I would take care of his children; he had recently lost his wife; I do not know that he had met with any pecuniary losses; Mr. Waldo Hutchings and Mr. Storrs came and tried to get him away; he did not say how he was ruined; he said nothing about the election; I have stated all the grounds upon which I base my opinion with regard to the soundness or unsoundness of his mind; when he spoke to me about being ruined, I told him that it was all nonsense—that he was not ruined at all; I tried to banter him to fight or talk back, so as to break up his despondent thoughts; it was on the 11th of November; I wanted to break up his train of thought; I made the promise I did to reassure him that I would stand by him; he made no statement to me in regard to any loss that he had sustained; he appeared to be perfectly rational the morning after he went with me to my house, on the 12th; I saw him for about two hours at Mr. Sinclair's, he joined in conversation, and then seemed quite rational for a minute or two, and then went off again into his despondency. He left him that night at Mr. Sinclair's, and did not see him again; some of Mr. Greeley's stock was sold to Mr. Hay, and some to pay a debt; he promised me and my wife that he would indorse no more paper; I afterward asked him if he had been doing so, and he said yes; I then asked him how he came to do so after he had promised not to do it; he replied that he did it to save whatshe had invested in some way; at the time of this conversation he had but six shares of the Tribune left.

Further proceedings were adjourned until Monday next.

Mr. Williams served Miss Ida Greeley with a citation in the matter of proving the will of Feb. 9, 1872, in order to receive the attention of the Surrogate on the 30th inst.

Mrs. Greeley's will was admitted to probate, yesterday, and Mr. Wm. M. Skinner appointed the guardian of Miss Gabrielle in this case also.

Mr. Joan R. Cleveland, who was appointed administrator ad litem on the Greeley estate, appeared before Surrogate Coffin, yesterday, and filed his bonds, Messrs. Manning and Storrs, executors named in the will of 1871, becoming his sureties to the amount of $100,000 each.

CHARLES BOWLES' STATEMENT.

Why Mr. Bowles Came to the United States—What Mr. Braman Says.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Dec. 18.—Mr. Charles Bowles, the head of the banking-house of Bowles Brothers & Co., and President of the Joint National Agency, was arrested here last night, at the civil suit of a Mr. Huber, of this city. The arrest was made upon the affidavit of Mr. Huber that he believed Mr. Bowles was about to leave the State, and was the ordinary arrest under the laws of the State upon so-called mesne process. Mr. Bowles is now at the Haynes House, and has given bail to the effect that he will not leave the State, but will hold himself, subject to its jurisdiction in this suit. Mr. Bowles makes the following statement: On the 11th of October last, he left London for the United States. He was much worn down, and it was thought by his partners that he would be benefited by a sea-voyage, and that, on his arrival in the United States, he could complete contemplated arrangements for the permanent relief of their business, the strain of which was particularly great at that season, from the large needs of Americans returning home. On his arrival in New-York he did make certain arrangements, which it was believed would carry his house through the pressure. At this time his health was worse, and having had an intention of going to Japan even when he left London, it was thought best that he should continue his sea-voyage to San Francisco, and upon his arrival there determine whether or no he should go on further. He sailed in the South American on Nov. 5. After his departure the arrangements made did not furnish relief in time, and the house of Bowles Brothers failed on the 9th of November. A telegram was at once sent by the house, from New-York, to Mr. Bowles at Aspinwall, via Kingston, informing him that the house had failed, and asking him to come straight back. This telegram did not reach him, as the cable was not working through. He continued his journey, and first heard of the failure of his house upon his arrival at Acapulco, where he read it in the papers. On his arrival at San Diego he heard of the arrest of his brother Robert. On reaching San Francisco he started, after two days' rest, for the East by rail, telegraphing to his brother to meet him at the Massasoit House, Springfield. He made no stop on the road, and met his brother, Gordon Bowles, at Springfield on Thursday last. That night the two brothers went to the Ingleside, a hotel near Holyoke, where Mr. Gordon Bowles had often been before, which was considered a favorable place for consultation between New-York and Boston, and a telegram was sent making an appointment there for Monday, with counsel from both places. This interview was continued until it was interrupted, on Tuesday afternoon, by the arrest of Mr. Bowles. During these days were present Mr. Charles Bowles; his brother, Mr. Gordon Bowles; his half-brother, Mr. W. F. Stetson; Mr. Appleton, special partner; Mr. Dwyer, an officer of the Joint National Agency, officially sent from London since the failure to represent in the United States its interests; Mr. Thomas E. Culvert, late Secretary to Mr. Bowles; and Mr. Derby, of Boston, and Mr. Beaman, of New-York, as counsel. This consultation was held to ascertain as clearly as possible the exact condition of affairs, and to determine what should be done to make all the assets in the most equitable manner available for the benefit of all the creditors, and whether it was for the interest of all that Mr. Charles Bowles should return at once to London.

Interrupted by the arrest and the necessity therefore to remain in Massachusetts, Mr. Bowles will not now go to London. During the consultation he repeatedly expressed his willingness to go there, and his opinion that it was his duty to go. Mr. Bowles has no intention, in any way, to avoid any proceedings which may be made against him civilly or criminally, other than to defend himself by the truth.

He has had no opportunity, as yet, to protect himself against the charges which have been made upon him, and, standing as the head of the House, he desires particularly that the public will suspend judgment upon those who have been associated with him, and will only finally condemn him or them when they have heard the other side. He does not seek to deny the grave faults of his too-extended management, but maintains his innocence of all crime and his ability to prove it.

Mr. Charles C. Beaman, of New York, who is now acting as general counsel for Bowles Brothers, also makes this statement. In the extraordinary circumstances of this case, as now before the public, Mr. Beaman feels bound to state that while acting as the solicitor of the United States before the tribunal of arbitration at Geneva last Summer he became acquainted with Mr. Bowles and others connected with the house. He knew nothing before he came here on Monday of the affairs of the firm, except in a general way from the newspapers and other sources; but he now believes the above statement made by Mr. Bowles to be true. Since he has been here he has for three days made as clear an examination of the affairs of Bowles Brothers & Co. as has been possible, and that while he has found many instances of defective judgment and bad management, he has found no proof of any intent to defraud any of the persons who have had relations with the firm. Great fault has been made, in his judgment, owing to what has been a too great confidence in their own future, which induced them to make expenses which they thought would not embarrass them, but would enable them to do a greater and enlarged business with perfect security to their customers and with profit to themselves. He can hardly ask a suspension of judgment from those who are now the creditors of the firm, but others who have so often had kindness from them will, he is confident, give Bowles Brothers & Co., in common fairness, an opportunity to present at the right time their side of this question.
